Plans Made For Fight to Halve Breast Cancer Toll

50 Percent Cut Possible, Doctors Told in Prelude To AMA Sessions

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

A new Nation-wide campaign to cut in half the annual death toll of breast cancer in women was launched here yesterday.

The campaign against the present high mortality rate was launched jointly by the Public Health Service and the American Cancer Society.

It was immediately promised full support by doctors assembling here for today's opening of the third annual clinical session of the American Medical Association.

Largely dependent on medical support, the campaign seeks to teach, first, the physicians and then the women themselves how to recognize the early signs of breast cancer.

Early Cases Curable

Breast cancer caught within the first few months of onset is nearly always curable, it was pointed out. Such early diagnosis has not been achieved generally, since nearly 50,000 women annually develop breast cancer with a five-year mortality rate of 50 percent.

The new cancer drive, not a fund-raising campaign, began at the Statler Hotel, headquarters for the AMA convention, with the premiere of a new cancer training film for doctors, "Breast Cancer: The Problem of Early Diagnosis."

The color film shows doctors just how to go about making a thorough examination to uncover early tumors of the breast. Dr. Murray M. Copeland, cancer teaching coordinator at Georgetown University Medical School, said need for such instruction was shown recently by a special survey.

The survey, he said, was conducted among patients under treatment for breast cancer at New York's Presbyterian Hospital. Its investigators found, he said, that 27 percent of the patients received incorrect advice from their physicians.

Film for Women

The film for the medical profession will be followed in a few months by a shorter movie, for showing at women's clubs, on self-examination of the breast for cancer's early signs.

Dr. Austin V. Diebert of the National Cancer Institute told the medical profession that the goal to halve present breast cancer deaths is "a practical goal."

"I think we can make it," he added.

Dr. Deibert said statistics show that if breast cancer is diagnosed early, the survival rate is 93 percent. If the cancer has begun to spread, the one-year survival rate

Freedom Fair Site on the Anacostia . . .

DOTTED LINE on photodiagram of proposed Freedom Fair buildings shows area in which officials are seeking a way to remove dormitory, temporary dwelling units and other structures

Funds Needed For Clearance Of Sesqui Site

Federal officials, in cooperation with the Sesquicentennial Commission, yesterday launched a rush-order search for a solution of how to clear the site for the Freedom Fair.

Edward Boykin, Sesquicentennial Commission director, told Federal housing and park officials that unless the problem of clearance is solved the commission may have to abandon its plans for the Freedom Fair, the key revenue-producing feature of next year's Sesquicentennial celebration here.

He said no immediate solution was found in the hour-long afternoon conference.

He said all the Government officials expressed complete willingness to find a solution, and that another conference will be held, probably within a week.

The Freedom Fair site, bordering the west bank of the Anacostia River at East Capitol st., is now the location of (1) a dormitory building occupied by about 175 Negro Government girl employes, (2) three neighboring buildings used mainly for files and (3) "mobile" family dwellings for Negroes.

To clear the site for the big USA Freedom Fair buildings, and adjoining structures, the existing buildings must go, but Boykin said the problem is being approached in a "humane and practical" way—"no one is going to be made homeless"—"we're looking for a happy solution."

A major factor in the problem, officials said, is the cost of relocating the facilities now on the Freedom Fair site.

Federal Housing officials estimate that if all the necessary space to transfer the facilities now on the site had to be rented, the cost would approach $500,000. Boykin said it would be up to the Commission to decide whether any of its funds could be spent for such a purpose. Federal officials said no funds have yet been found for the relocation, and that congressional action might be needed. But until Congress meets, these officials added, every effort will be made to find the necessary legal solution.

Housing officials said the most difficult problem involves the 61 family housing units. But they said land may be found near by to relocate the dwellings. That question is being explored.

As for the Government girls'

Children's Hospital Reports Best Year

Children's Hospital board members were told yesterday that the hospital had no operating expense deficit for the past year.

The board, in annual meeting, was asked to expand services in rheumatic fever, cerebral palsy, infantile paralysis and childhood cancer. (Details on Page 10.)

Sparks, Smoke Panic Trolley; 7 Injured Trying to Escape

A broken streetcar power wire that showered smoke and sparks over the vehicle threw its passengers into panic last night and sent seven of them to a hospital.

Windows were broken and the doors forced as men and women tried to reach exits when the car stopped in darkness in the middle of Georgia ave. and Irving st. nw.

According to police, the mishap occurred as the streetcar passed a control box at the intersection at 5:30 p. m. The broken, burning power line fell alongside the trolley, causing the car to fill with smoke.

Traffic was tied up along both thoroughfares for about an hour although passengers along the line were transported by buses that took over when the streetcar lines were held up.

Treated at Freedmen's Hospital for cuts, bruises and other injuries were:

Minnie Coleman, 34, of 756 Morrison st. nw.; Daniel Ward, 35, of 5618 9th st. nw.; Lancie Malloy, 26, of 740 Newton pl. nw.; Irma McCloud, 54, of 5723 9th st. nw.; Maude Paschall, 28, of 3302 Park pl. nw.; Charles Epps, 28, of 1425 D st. ne., and Katherine Bailey, 24, of 1421 Florida ave. nw.

The streetcar was operated by George Oliver, 24, of 7430 Georgia ave. nw., police reported. He was unhurt.

Several motorcycle men were called to assist precinct police in handling curious bystanders and to expedite traffic.

Coffee Price Rise Laid to Scare Stories

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

A price-probing Senate Agriculture Subcommittee headed by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) yesterday found out how coffee prices have skyrocketed since September.

George McLaughlin, 80, a retired Government clerk, told the subcommittee about watching a Safeway clerk change the price of Borden's instant coffee from 42 to 51 cents a jar, while he was waiting to make a purchase.

J. Arnold Anderson, who sets prices for Safeway here, said the price markup came three weeks after the wholesale price had been raised 6½ cents a jar. For several weeks, he said, Safeway had sold

Turkeys for Sale— 725,000 Pounds of Them

The Agriculture Department yesterday tossed 725,000 pounds of turkeys into the Christmas pot. They are small-sized birds, now in demand, that were bought this fall to support turkey prices.

The Government will sell them in carload lots. They must bring at least parity—10 percent more than Uncle Sam paid for them, which was from 45 to 46 cents a pound.

Two Women Hurt In Season's First Icy Road Accident

Two women were cut and bruised yesterday in the first icy pavement traffic accident of the season.

Police said Miss Jane Gordon, 28, driver, 1752 Irving st. nw., and Miss Fonilyn Tomlin, 27, passenger, 1800 Irving st. nw., were in a car on Rock Creek parkway.

They said ice had collected on the pavement.

Miss Gordon's auto skidded approximately 100 feet, police said, knocked down a light pole and struck an abutment of the Calvert st. bridge. Both were treated at Emergency Hospital. Miss Gordon was released and Miss Tomlin transferred to Mount Alto Veterans Hospital, in good condition.

Quints Reported Born in Colombia, In Good Health

Medellin, Colombia, Dec. 5 (AP).—The birth of quintuplets—all boys—was reported today in a telegram from the mayor of Angostura, a town about 50 miles southeast of here.

The mayor said Maria Arroyave, wife of Alfonso Arroyave, gave birth to the quints several days ago. He said they were in good health and had been baptized Fermin, Ramiro, Rodrigo, Nabor and Francisco.

Orders were issued by the Governor of the Department of Antioquia to transfer the mother and children to Medellin for the best available medical attention.

High Court Arguments Slated On Gulf Tidelands Oil Feb. 5

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday swept aside objections by Texas and Louisiana and set February 5 as the day it will hear arguments on whether the Federal Government owns the oil-rich tidelands off the two Gulf States.

The Government has contended the States were employing delaying tactics in the long court battle in an effort to get a settlement through Congress before a Supreme Court decision could be handed down. Texas had asked a special master be named to hear testimony and Louisiana called for a jury trial.

Now the high court will rule directly on the Government's request for a judgment, declaring it and not the States has full ownership or primary rights. The court already has declared the Government has primary rights in the case of California's tidelands.

If the Government gets such a ruling, it expects to collect royalties paid the States by oil companies since the California decision in 1947.

In yesterday's ruling setting the hearing, Justices Douglas, Jackson and Clark took no part. Douglas, however, is expected back on the bench in January, so the final de-

World Arms Census Voted By Assembly

Russians Lose Fight to Include Atom Bomb Tally, Threaten Boycott

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—The United Nations Assembly overwhelmingly approved today a world census of ordinary arms and armed forces, but bitter Soviet objections showed the Russian bloc would not submit any information.

The Russians tried vainly to have the move call for a count of atomic bombs, too.

Refusal of the Soviet bloc to cooperate makes it unlikely that any other countries, especially the Western powers, will turn in figures.

Pistols to Warships

The Assembly voted 44 to 5 (Slav bloc) for the census of weapons technically called conventional armaments. This would include anything from pistols to the largest warships and planes but would not include atomic bombs or any other weapons of mass destruction.

The West argues such a census is the first step in setting up a scheme for arms limitation.

The Assembly batted down a Soviet resolution calling on countries to submit both information on armed forces and conventional armaments and information on atomic weapons.

The vote was 6 for the Soviet proposal, 39 against and 9 abstentions. Egypt voted with the Soviet bloc in favor of including atomic bombs.

Decision Approved Again

The Assembly action approved once more a decision of the U. N. Commission for Conventional Armaments that it has no business dealing with atomic weapons since the U. N. Atomic Energy Commission was set up for that purpose.

The Soviet bloc has contended that it is useless to count conventional armaments without including atomic bombs.

The Russians accused the Western powers of rearming Western Germany and preparing for a new war.

France charged the Russians were trying to trap the Western powers into disarming while the Soviet builds an army unprecedented in history.

United States Assistant Secretary of State John D. Hickerson told the Russians that Western Europe is rearming, and the United States is helping it, "because they fear the intentions of the Soviet Union."

McKellar Recovered; On Way to Washington

Johnson City, Tenn., Dec. 5 (AP).—Senator K. D. McKellar (D., Tenn.) left for Washington by train today after his dismissal from the Veterans Administration Hospital.

McKellar told newsmen he was "feeling fine" and would resume his duties in the Capitol.

The 80-year-old legislator entered the hospital for treatment of second-degree burns he received when he fell against a hot water tap in his Memphis hotel room.

Poles Say Monty Made Talk on Arming Germans

New York, Dec. 5 (NYHT)—Poland charged in the U. N. General Assembly today that Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, on his recent visit here, secretly told Wall Street leaders that American public opinion must be primed for the rearming of Western Germany against the Communist nations.

The Polish delegation said later the Montgomery statement was supposedly made in an off-the-record foreign policy talk.

Shirley Temple Wins Divorce; Charges Agar Philandered

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP).—Shirley Temple won a divorce today, testifying that her husband, actor John Agar, drank to excess, romanced other women and even drove her to thinking of suicide.

Composed but tearful, the 21-year-old actress who enchanted millions as a child star, told the court:

"About five months after we were married he began not coming home nights for dinner. First it was 8 o'clock, then 10 o'clock and finally 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning.

"When I was about two months pregnant he came home about 4 a. m. with lipstick all over his face. He was very intoxicated.

"When I was about five months pregnant, at 1:30 a. m. he brought a girl into our bedroom. He was supposed to be out playing cards with the fellows. But he came home with several people and he brought this girl into the room and said 'Let's all go out to a party.' Of course, I didn't get up. He left and returned about 4 a. m.

"One night Jack came home drunk again, very belligerent, and called me names. After dinner I jumped in my car. I was going to drive over a cliff or something, but instead drove to the doctor."

Agar, 28-year-old former Air Force sergeant, did not contest the divorce. He is now in Buffalo, N. Y.

Superior Judge Roy L. Herndon granted Miss Temple the decree, which becomes final after a year. He also restored her maiden name, ordered Agar to pay $100-a-month support for their child, Linda Susan, 22 months, and gave her custody of the youngster. A property settlement said there is no community property and stated that the Agars had established a trust fund for Linda Susan.

They were married September 19, 1945.

Gen. Groves Called to Testify On Reported Aid to Russians

Lewis Had Charged Manhattan Project Head was Overruled By Ex-Vice President

By The Associated Press

Radio Commentator Fulton Lewis, jr., said in a broadcast last night that former Vice President Henry A. Wallace was the behind-the-scenes Government official who insisted that atomic materials and plans be sent to Russia during World War II.

In a broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System, Lewis said the shipments were made over the protests of American atomic officials.

Lewis appeared on the radio program with former Air Force Maj. Racey Jordan.

Lewis told a reporter that Wallace "overruled" Maj. Gen. Leslie Groves, the Army's wartime head of the atomic project, on the shipment of A-bomb material to the Russians.

In New York, Wallace issued this statement:

Jordan Note Paper Of '43 to be Tested For Age by House Investigating Unit

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House Committee on Un-American Activities yesterday summoned Lieut. Gen. Leslie R. Groves, wartime head of the atomic bomb project, to tell what he knows of reported shipments of uranium products or atomic information to Russia.

Groves was requested to appear before the committee in open session Wednesday following charges by George Racey Jordan, former Army Air Force major, that Harry Hopkins ordered a rush shipment of atomic materials to Russia in early 1944.

Checking Jordan's story, committee investigators cast about for any facts that would tend either to corroborate or dispute some of the charges the wartime liaison officer first broadcast last Friday and then spelled out in more detail before the House group yesterday.

Paper's Age to be Tested

A memoranda sheet, on which Jordan said he jotted down some of the contents of rope-tied suitcases the Russians sped in Army planes over the Alaska route to the USSR in 1943-44, will be tested by the committee for age, it was learned.

In addition, the committee launched an inquiry to determine whether Harry Hopkins ever used printed stationery of the type Jordan said he found in one of the suitcases, bearing this message: "Had a hell of a time getting these away from Groves."

Members of the committee will ask Groves among other things what his wartime contacts with Hopkins were, whether Hopkins ever "got anything away from him," and if so, what.

Says Hopkins Ordered "Quiet"

Jordan told the committee he never knew Hopkins and talked to him only once. In early 1944 he said he was "ordered" by Hopkins by telephone to expedite a load of atomic materials to Russia and to keep "quiet" about it.

Jordan also told of finding the note signed "H. H." in one of the cheap black patent leather suitcases he said he searched over Russian protests. He said he "believed" the note was addressed to A. I. Mikoyan, now Russian foreign trade minister, whom he then was advised was "one of the two or three most important men in Russia."

In other suitcases, loaded aboard Army transport planes and bombers at an Army air field near Great Falls, Mont., the former air officer, who said he served as wartime liaison man and "expediter" for Russian purchasing agents, said he found in the suitcases other vital defense data, including maps of the Panama Canal and locations of important

Mine Owners To Stand Pat Against Lewis

By The Associated Press

Southern coal producers asserted they are standing pat against any new contract which would give John L. Lewis the power to tell them how to use their mines.

Lewis did just that today, however, by putting his 480,000 hard and soft coal diggers back on a three-day work week.

Southern producers were known to have considered shutting down their mines or going into court for an injunction to prevent Lewis from putting the three-day week into effect. But those alternatives were pushed aside, at least for the time being.

Attorneys for the operators admit that Lewis' miners are within their legal rights in withholding their services except on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

If the operators want to lock them out, they can do so. Or if they want to try to produce coal with nonunion miners on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, they could. But either move seemed remote.

After a four-hour meeting of his board of directors, Joseph E. Moody, president of the Southern Coal Producers Association, con-

British Atom Pile Work Stops; Chief Returns From U. S.

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Britain stopped work on a large atom pile today because of the possibility of "developments in the near future."

Some sources speculated that the British might be counting on a greater exchange of atomic information with the United States.

Britain's atomic work might be altered if scientists here were given some of the Americans' know-how.

A spokesman said the halt was called "after a review of the program and in the light of possible developments in the near future."

The announcement came as Britain's atomic chief, Sir John Cockroft, returned from a visit with United States and Canadian atomic experts.

2 UE Leaders Defy Quiz on Red Allegiance

(Related Story, Page 9)

Two United Electrical Workers officials who recently signed non-Communist affidavits refused to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday whether they were ever Communists.

They were Julius Emspak, general secretary of the union, and James J. Matles, director of organization.

The UE was expelled from the CIO several weeks ago as a Communist-dominated union. Emspak was described by the House committee last year as a Communist.

He testified yesterday it was none of the committee's business (1) whom he associated with, (2) whom he knew, or (3) what his political beliefs were.

Recalling that he recently filed a non-Communist affidavit, a committee attorney asked him, "Are you a member of the Communist Party?"

"The affidavit speaks for itself," Emspak replied.

The Taft-Hartley Act requires that non-Communist affidavits be filed by officials of unions that wish to use the machinery of the National Labor Board.

"Who I know or don't know doesn't concern this committee," Emspak said. "I don't think the committee has the right to pry into my associations."

Matles protested that the whole matter had been gone into previously by the House committee. Refusing to give direct replies to questions about previous party affiliation, he said "I am trying to save some taxpayers' money."

Matles accused the committee of trying to lay the groundwork for a "frame-up" and he said: "I believe Mr. Murray and Mr. Carey had something to do with that personally."

Philip Murray is CIO president; James Carey, secretary.

Czechs' Chicago Consul, Ordered Home, Resigns

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—Dr. Ladislav Hynko, Czechoslovak consul general in Chicago since October 1, 1948, announced today he had resigned his post and applied for political sanctuary in the United States.

Dr. Hynko said he had been ordered back to his Communist-dominated homeland January 1.

"I am not a Communist," he said.

Ex-Representative May Enters Prison to Serve Bribery Term

Ashland, Ky., Dec. 5 (AP).—Elderly Andrew J. May gave up his pearl gray hat and his business suit with the white piping on the vest today for the garb of a prisoner of the Federal Government.

Complaining of his health, the nearly 75-year-old former chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee was admitted to the Ashland Federal correctional institution before daylight, after elaborate planning to outfox newsmen.

His sentence: Eight months to two years on conviction for bribery and conspiracy.

Barring a presidential pardon, he will wear blue denims for at least the minimum of eight months, after which he will be eligible for parole on good behavior.

He received as part of his prison outfit, after signing the prison register in a shaky hand, a gray-green denim short coat and slouch hat.

May was aided in his successful effort to slip into the prison which he had fought to avoid for more than two years—since his conviction, July 3, 1947—by his old friend, John M. Moore of Lexington, United States marshal for eastern Kentucky.

They met by prearrangement at the Boyd County Courthouse in nearby Catlettsburg, Ky., at 6:10 a. m. May had been driven there

250 Men at Work On Atomic Plant Walk Off Job

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Some 250 workers building a new plant which will produce uranium-235 for atomic bombs walked off the job today protesting the use of nonunion labor on another Oak Ridge Project.

Gordon Molesworth, assistant to the manager of the Atomic Energy Commission at Oak Ridge, said the surprise walkout would "interrupt the construction schedule" on the 66 million dollar high-priority project.

Molesworth said the men, laying gas lines from the projected plant to a main line also under construction, gave neither warning nor reason for the walkout. It was understood they objected to employment of nonunion labor by the Oman Construction Co., which has a contract to build the main line.

A spokesman for the Teamsters local union in Knoxville, said the walkout was spearheaded by the AFL Steamfitters. Elmer Armstrong, business agent for the Steamfitters, declined to comment in the work stoppage.

Arm Europe Or Face War, Collins Says

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Air Force announced yesterday it is diverting 50 million dollars from other projects to start immediate construction of a far-flung aircraft warning net.

Radar stations will be established in Alaska and continental United States to warn of any attacking aircraft which might approach from over the polar regions or the Atlantic or Pacific oceans.

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF chief of staff, said "other approved projects in the Air Force 1950 budget have been canceled or reduced to permit the first increment of the network to be started immediately."

He did not disclose what work had been cutback or eliminated to make possible the program.

"Sites which comprise the net have in most cases already been surveyed and selected both in the United States and Alaska," Vandenberg said.

He added that leases, entry rights and construction plans have been completed in most cases. Of the total, $18,800,000 will be spent in the United States and the remainder in Alaska.

Canada is building a similar string of radar stations which will operate in conjunction with the American system. In an emergency, United States Navy ships would be stationed at key points to fill gaps in the network where land radar posts cannot be maintained.

Total cost of the radar network has been officially estimated at $161,000,000, but Congress authorized only $85,500,000 for starting the project last session. And the legislators specified that 50 million dollars could be spent during this fiscal year by diverting funds from other purposes.

About 8300 Air Force men will operate the radar chain when complete, backed by 13,000 reservists who could be called in an emergency.

Lieut. Gen. Ennis C. Whitehead, commander of the Continental Air Command, whose headquarters are at Mitchell Air Base, New York, will operate the United States portion of the net, and Brig. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, jr., Alaskan air commander, will have charge of the Alaska work.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Gen. J. Lawton Collins today said the United States must not abandon its military aid to Europe too soon.

The Army Chief of Staff acknowledged the military aid program costs money and sacrifices, but said the alternative is war.

General Collins said prevention of war is largely an application of sound business principles in national and international affairs.

"We have a product—the democratic way of life—which we have been perfecting for many years and which has proved to be the best on the market," he told the annual meeting of the Public Relations Society of America.

"Now a competitor has entered the market with the offer of a phony substitute—communism.

"In this competition for the hearts and minds of men, each side is endeavoring to make its own way of life so attractive that it will appeal to most of the nations of the world."

General Collins said he did not wish to deprecate the danger that communism presents, but that he felt too many Americans have succumbed to "Communist clap-trap that democracy and communism cannot live together in one world, and that therefore war is inevitable."

"Just as the vendors of inferior products must eventually withdraw to markets where they have a monopoly," he said, "the history of fanatical expansionist movements shows that they have eventually diminished in vigor and have to retreat.

"In much the same way, I feel that communism may lose its aggresiveness. This is our great hope. But until we can be assured that this has occurred, we cannot be assured of peace."

Bush Sees U. S. Peril in Voter Handout Pleas

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Dr. Vannevar Bush said today that Russia will conquer the world if Americans keep on looking to the Government for handouts.

The wartime head of the Office of Scientific Research and Development and the National Defense Research Committee said at a Massachusetts Institute of Technology convocation that "I believe the American people are too tough-minded to pursue a will-o'-the-wisp over a cliff."

But he warned the Russian dictatorship "would destroy us if opportunity offered."

Yielding Birthright

"A people bent on soft security," he added, "surrendering their birthright of individual self-reliance for favors, voting themselves into Eden from a supposedly inexhaustible public purse, supporting everyone by soaking a fast-disappearing rich . . . will not measure up to competition with a tough dictatorship."

The 59-year-old scientific administrator, now head of the Carnegie Institute, criticized President Truman for wanting to boost the annual national income by one to three billion dollars.

Moving Too Fast

Bush said this increase might come about without economic dislocation within a generation, "but the President had in mind no such interval; he calls on us to move much faster."

"We can outpace ourselves, attempt too much and wreck the industry on which all material progress depends," he added.

The "most important imponderable in the world's vocabulary today"—the strength of the free democratic system versus totalitarianism—can be answered without war "if we are strong," he said.

"Those in the Kremlin recognize strength if they recognize nothing else."

Wright Medal Will Be Given To Lindbergh

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH
. . . To get air honor

Charles A. Lindbergh will receive the 1949 Wright Brothers Memorial Trophy for outstanding public service in aviation over the past 22 years, the National Aeronautic Association announced yesterday.

The award, made possible under a trust fund created by Godfrey Lowell Cabot, Boston, will be made at the annual Wright Brothers memorial dinner to be held here by the Washington Aero Club on December 17— forty-sixth anniversary of the Wrights' first flight.

Lindbergh became one of the most celebrated figures of aviation when he made the first transatlantic, nonstop, solo flight in the "Spirit of St. Louis" in 1927. He is today a special consultant to Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, and operates with fighter and bomber groups all over the world.

Selected from some 15 nominees by a committee of aviation leaders, Lindbergh receives the award for "significant public service of enduring value to aviation in the United States."

Calling Boss Liar Justifies Penalty, NLRB Aid Holds

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—A labor board abitrator has ruled a textile company at Marion, Va., was justified in suspending a worker for two days because he called a foreman a liar.

The case involved Wilburn Steele, a member of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, and Ernest Sawyer, foreman in the cloth cutting department at the Marion Manufacturing Co.

"It was not the use of profanity for which Steele was disciplined," said Earle K. Shaw, arbitrator for the National Labor Relations Board. "It was his unmistakable and unnecessary attack on the personal integrity of a representative of the employer.

"The skillful use of profanity has been called a 'lost art' with a forcefulness and beauty all its own."

U. S. Cannot Feed World, Brannan Tells FAO

The United States cannot feed the world, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan told the United Nations Food and Agriculture conference at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

Brannan pointed out to the 63-nation gathering that the much-publicized surpluses in this country wouldn't go far to meet world needs.

"The actual surpluses we have or anticipate," he said, "are very small in terms of the additional food needed to bring the world up to a minimum nutritional standard.

"Of the food commodities held by my Government, only nonfat dry milk, dry beans, dried eggs and Mexican canned meat are actually surplus."

Sweden was elected as the sixty-third member of the FAO yesterday. The Swedith delegate, Helmer Olsson, told the conference he hopes Swedith experts in agricultural mattesr wil bel able to contribute to the FAO.

To reporters afterward, Brannan predicted that this year's carry-over of grain will amount to about 300 million bushels of wheat and 70 million bushels of corn.

"I don't consider 300 million bushels of wheat a dangerous surplus," he said. "If we had had that amount in 1947 at the time of our disastrous corn crop failure, it would have gone far toward preventing the serious dislocations that followed. It would have helped avoid the meat shortage and the drop in dairy production that resulted from lack of feed grains."

Brannan told his news conference that some surpluses the country now has might have been avoided by different planning.

"We have 67 million pounds of dried eggs," he pointed out. "That is equivalent to 190 million dozens of eggs. If every American had eaten an extra dozen this year—one egg more a month—we wouldn't have any surplus now."

Then, apparently with hi proposed farm program—known as the Brannan Plan—in mind, he added:

"If eggs had been cheaper many more would have been eaten." Many of those the law required the Commodity Credit Corporation to buy, he said, were types that would have been unacceptable to consumer buying. They were small, culls, off-colored and other lower-grade eggs, he said.

In a similar vein, he said that if each American had used a trifle more milk last year, price supports for milk would have cost little or nothing, and the Government would have avoided the purchase of 90 million pounds of butter it now holds.

Brannan revealed that the Government this year expects to export 450 million bushels of wheat and a total of 500 million bushels of all grains—almost as much as a year ago, and vastly more than before the war.

Brannan's remarks before the FAO sounded the death knell of an earlier FAO proposal for an International Commodity Clearing House.

Indorses Committee Idea

Instead of the ICCH, Brannan indorsed the new FAO scheme for a Committee on Commodity Problems. This committee would maintain a constant study of food problems. Its goal would be to bring countries with food shortages into negotiation with those with surpluses. As Brannan explained it, it would act as the International Emergency Food Council did in the near-world famine of 1945-1947.

Brannan pointed out to FAO and emphasized to newsmen that the United States did not take the lead in ditching ICCH.

"Most so-called soft currency countries have clearly indicated that the fiscal operations proposed under ICCH would jeopardize their own efforts to regain a reasonable balance in their trade with the rest of the world and to restore the convertibility of their currencies," he said.

"These were the basic reasons why the United States joined in the opposition."

The Administration was confident that the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization was going to stay in the United States, Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan said yesterday.

As a result, when FAO voted to go Italy, Brannan had made no plans what to do with the 30 odd acres of land at Chevy Chase-Bethesda owned by the department that was offered as an FAO site.

The Maryland National Capital Parks and Planning Commission has been trying to get the Agriculture site for years for recreational purposes. A deal now seems likely.

Chinese Reds Push Drive on Chengtu

Tientsin Bound

Rescue Ship Sails to Get Ward, Aides

Tokyo, Dec. 5 (AP).—The stubby wartime merchantman Lakeland Victory started its journey today to bring American Consul Gen. Angus Ward and his staff from Communist China.

The Lakeland Victory is due at the bar off Tienstin on December 10, the day the Ward party is expected to arrive from Mukden.

(Because of the shallowness of the River Ho which flows through Tientsin and the sand bar at its mouth, large ships are unable to proceed directly to Tientsin. The Ward party may come down the river by small boat or use the highway or train from Tientsin to Taku, a distance of about 24 miles.)

A United States Army doctor will be aboard to give the Americans any medical attention they may need after more than a year in Communist hands in Mukden. The entire consulate party was expelled by the Communists after Ward and four aides were tried for allegedly beating a Chinese employed by the consulate.

Hongkong, Dec. 5, (AP).—Chinese Red troops in a burst of speed today were reported only 100 miles or so from Chengtu, temporary and fearful Nationalist capital in western China.

The flight of government officials took on more urgency, press reports declared. A defense line was thrown up 30 to 50 miles from the city.

Press accounts said the fast-traveling troops of Red Gen. Liu Po-cheng had pushed on beyond Neikiang, midway point on the 210-mile road between Chungking and Chengtu.

Associated Press Correspondent Spencer Moosa, in Chengtu, had reported only 24 hours before that the Communists were at Jungchang. That city is 40 miles east of Neikiang.

The newspaper Sing Tao Min Po said in a dispatch from Chengtu that a considerable number of government officials were being urgently assembled at the airfield to be taken to Formosa, Nationalist island stronghold.

This squared with Moosa's report that many of them were leaving for Formosa by way of Hainan Island, off China's south coast.

Premier Yen Hsi-shan's mobile government, however, is scheduled to leave for Sichang, 225 miles to the southwest.

When the capital was set up at Chengtu last Tuesday it was predicted the city would last from two to three weeks. This estimate apparently was too optimistic.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek still is in Chengtu and his old friend, Gen. Hu Tsung-nan, took over the city's defenses.

There was nothing new on the southern front, where Gen. Pai Chung-hsi was reported Sunday to be withdrawing most of his 250,000-man army to Hainan Island.

U. N. Decision Postponed On Charges Against Reds

Lake Success, Dec. 5 (AP).—Nationalist China accepted today a face-saving compromise to delay indefinitely any United Nations decision on her charges that Russia is helping Chinese Reds to power.

By this action the Nationalist delegation grimly recognized it had no chance of receiving anything like a majority promise from U. N. members not to grant diplomatic recognition to Mao Tze-thung's Peiping regime.

The compromise was introduced in the General Assembly's 59-nation Political Committee by Cuba, Ecuador and Peru. It would refer the Chinese case to the year-around Little Assembly for "continuous examination and study." The Little Assembly would report to the General Assembly next fall.

Student Held As Poisoner Of Relative

Sidney, Iowa, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—A brilliant young student was charged with murder today in the poison death of his grandfather while police investigated the possibility that his mother, his grandmother and his great-grandmother also were poisoned.

Lyman Elefson, 22, peering at newsmen through black-rimmed glasses, denied that he knew anything about the poisoning.

The former University of Iowa student was charged with first-degree murder after an autopsy on the exhumed body of his grandfather, Alonzo Rhode, 75, showed he died "definitely" of arsenic poisoning last April 26.

Meanwhile authorities investigated the deaths of his mother, Mrs. Winifred Elefson, 47, last August 22, and his grandmother, Mrs. Lucy Ann Rhodes, 72, May 31, 1948.

Elefson's great-grandmother, Mrs. Anna Kemp, also may have been poisoned, but she recovered from her illness, County Attorney Harold L. Martin said.

Elefson was arretsed last week on information signed by his uncle, Wayne Rhode, of Tabor, Iowa. The bodies of his grandparents were exhumed after he aroused suspicion by demanding that his mother's body be cremated, without autopsy, within two hours after her death.

A report on the examination of the grandmother's body was not yet available.

Elefson's attorneys said he stood to inherit $2800 and 80 acres of land from his grandfather and $5000 from his mother.

Four More Give Guilty Plea In Yugoslav Espionage Trial

Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, Dec 5 (U.P.). The last four of the 10 White Russians on trial here for espionage and wartime collaboration with the Nazis pleaded guilty tonight.

Examination of the 10 was concluded and the case will go for verdict to the three-man tribunal of the Sarajevo District Court Tuesday after the prosecution and the defense have given their summaries.

The trial, which began Thursday concluded quickly in its first night session as the last four fluently confessed to all charges in the indictment and told of distributing anti-Tito propaganda.

Earlier in the day the only one of the defendants to declare his innocence amended his plea to "slightly guilty" after the prosecutor repeatedly accused him of lying.

Arsen Boremovic, 48, changed his plea. He also is charged with war crimes. Another defendant, a Russian Orthodox priest, said he was only "partly guilty." The other eight, including a woman, confessed in full. She is charged only with collaboration.

Those who pleaded guilty today are Vassili Kostrojukov, Vadim Gesler, Petar Sokolov and Georg Oljevsky.

Fire Chief Puts Uranium Mine Deaths at 3700

Frankfurt, Germany, Dec. 5 (AP). The newspaper Lueneburger Landeszeitung quoted a Soviet zone fire chief today as estimating that 3700 persons died in the uranium mine fire of November 24.

The British-licensed Berlin Telegraf, which first reported the fire at the Johanngeorgenstadt mine in the Soviet zone, said last week 2000 persons lost their lives. East zone newspapers scoffed at Telegraf's story and said only one miner died.

The Lueneburg newspaper said the fire chief's brigade was among those summoned to the fire in Saxony, 150 miles south of Berlin. It quoted him as saying he fled to Western Germany since the fire rather than take a job as fire guard at the mine.

While at the fire, he was quoted, he learned 4000 workers were underground when an explosion occurred and only 300 escaped.

Landeszeitung said the fire chief showed his identity papers but asked that his name not be used because his family still is in the Soviet zone.

Progressives Plan $250,000 Campaign

New York, Dec. 4 (AP).—The Progressive Party drew up a platform today for the 1950 congressional elections and made plans for a $250,000 campaign fund drive.

Henry Wallace, former Vice President who headed the Progressive ticket last year, and Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York State chairman of the American Labor Party, the Progressives' New York arm, were present at a closed national committee meeting.

West Germans Would Arm 'If Asked To' by Allies

Frankfurt, Dec. 5 (AP).—A spokesman today said the West German Republic would consent under certain conditions to form a German army but would not propose it.

The government spokesman said he was endeavoring to "correct misleading reports spread by various news agencies over an interview with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer by the correspondent of the United States newspaper, Cleveland Plain Dealer."

The Plain Dealer was quoted Saturday as saying Adenauer proposed that Germany "should contribute to the defense of Europe in a European army under command of higher European headquarters," and that any German armed force should be "just one department under a European command."

The report of Adenauer interview stirred up a commotion here in political circles. The Communist Party delegation in Parliament filed a motion demanding that the Chancellor make a statement on the interview. The Catholic Center Party said it will file a bill which would assure every German the right to refuse military service. This right already is included in the German constitution.

The spokesman said Adenauer had declared "fundamentally he was against a rearmament of Germany in any form" because she needs her whole power for reconstruction.

If the Western Allies insisted upon it, however, Germany would be willing to form an army as part of a European army under European command, the spokesman went on.

Phone Tap Oath By FBI Ordered In Coplon Trial

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan ordered the Government today to produce affidavits telling whether the FBI has any records of telephone conversations made by Judith Coplon or Valentin Gubitchev.

Ryan directed that the affidavits be made by an FBI official and brought before him next Monday.

His ruling came in a new defense move to block the spy conspiracy trial of Miss Coplon, former Justice Department employe, and Gubitchev, Soviet engineer now suspended from his United Nations post.

They contend the indictment against them should be thrown out on the ground that it was based on "illegal" wire-tapping evidence.

Pope Calls Undermining Faith 'Mortal Blow' Against Liberty

Vatican City, Dec. 5 (AP).—Pope Pius XII told a group of American Congressmen that destruction of faith in God is a "mortal blow" against liberty.

"No fact today has been more patently demonstrated," he said, and added that "no policy, domestic or foreign, can safeguard human rights and secure man peace with just freedom, unless it takes its inspiration from that same truth and be activated in a spirit of His love for all."

The Pope described Christianity as "a revolution" that "dated from that first Christmas night in Bethlehem" and whose teachings "could not but seem revolutionary to Nero and to every despot down the years."

Pointing out St. Peter's Basilica, visible outside, the Pope said. "This massive pile . . . carries the mind back to when the first apostles of Christ's nascent church were hounded and tortured by the imperial tyrants because they taught that men had an inherent dignity and rights that no earthly power dare challenge in justice."

Congressmen who were received by the Pope were Joseph L. Pfeifer (D., N. Y.), Thomas S. Gordon (D., Ill.) and Clement J. Zablocki (D., Wis.).

75 A-Bombs Seen Equal to 5-Year Raids

London, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Seventy-five atomic bombs could do the same damage that Allied planes caused in Germany in five years of conventional bombing raids, Home Secretary James Chuter Ede said today.

But proper civil defense should prevent "a very high proportion" of the casualties that would otherwise occur in any A-bomb attack in future, he added.

Chuter Ede said the Home Office would be responsible for civil defense if Britain were attacked.

Addressing the City of London Defense Committtee, the Home Secretary said:

"The two largest single raids of the war were at Hamburg and Tokyo. More casualties were caused by the raid on Hamburg than by the atomic bomb at Nagasaki, and the damage done to that city was equal to that from two atomic bombs.

"The incendiary raid on Tokyo in 1945 was much greater in loss of life and destruction than the atom bomb of Hiroshima, even though it did not obliterate Tokyo as a city."

In Commons, Supply Minister George Strauss said Britain now has two atomic piles operating. Asked whether Britain had the atomic bomb herself, he refused to answer.

Pondered Bridge Leap, Treasury Clerk Is Held

A Treasury Department clerk was taken to Gallinger Hospital yesterday for mental observation when police feared he would jump from Sousa Bridge.

Answering a warning that a man was about to jump, Police Pvt. J. R. Panettaa found George C. Upperman, 40, of 1816 B st. se., leaning over the rail. Panetta said he asked Upperman if he intended to jump, and the reply was "maybe." At the Fifth Precinct Station, police said, Upperman declined to talk.

Retirement Pay Claim Ruled Out

The Court of Claims yesterday turned down the suit of Augustin M. Prentiss for civil service retirement benefits although he made no contributions from his salary.

Prentiss, 1910 23d st. se., served seven years as a civilian employe of the Government and 32 years as an Army officer. He asserted he was not required to contribute to the retirement fund while on Army service.

The court, however, called the claim "premature" and "unfounded" because the law states cash payments shall be related to the amount deposited by an employe.

President Planning 3 Major Talks

Key West, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—The "working force" moved into President Truman's vacation headquarters tonight to help him lay the groundwork for an election year fight for the "Fair Deal."

The men who do the rarely publicized spadework, research and writing that form the basis for ultimate high-level policy flew in to join the President and Special Counsel Clark M. Clifford in whipping three important January messages into shape.

Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman brought down ammunition in the form of "written suggestions" from members of the Cabinet and others for the "State of the Union," budget and economic messages.

Mr. Truman will deliver the first to Congress in person and send the others up later.

The President's "State of the Union" message will call for virtually everything in the "Fair Deal" that Congress failed to enact this year. There will be a renewal of his request for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, passage of the civil rights proposals and expansion of the Social Security Act also will be asked.

There will be, too, a new drive for enactment of the national health program and the Brannan farm plan which stirred up a controversy in the last session.

Windsor Visits London

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Duke of Windsor arrived here from Paris today for a brief private visit. His American-born duchess remained in France.

Hollywood Beach, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announced today a refunding of 100 million dollars of its 250 million dollars outstanding bonds.

Eugene R. Black, bank president, said that about the first of January the bank would call for redemption of its 100-million-dollar 10-year 2¼ percent bonds due July 15, 1957, at the call price of 101, and that in mid-January the bank will offer serial bonds in the same amount at competitive bidding.

The new serial bonds will mature over a period of from 3 to 12 years at the rate of 10 million dollars a year. They are to go on sale about February 1, with delivery about February 15.

Black in explaining the purpose of the refunding said that he felt the bank could borrow at a lower rate. He said it had been found that serial issues suit the bank's purposes better.

The new steps he said, also will help ascertain more closely what the bank's credit is worth.

It is understood that three large groups have been formed to bid on the new issue, and that there may be a fourth. One group, headed by the Chase National Bank, includes also the First Boston Corp., Solomon Brothers & Hutzler, and C. J. Devine.

The second group is headed by the National City Bank and includes Kuhn, Loeb & Co., and J. P. Morgan & Co. The third is composed of the Bankers Trust Co. and Morgan Stanley & Co.

The bonds being called were sold at par on July 15, 1947, through 1700 securities dealers throughout the country. Along with a 150-million-dollar issue of 25-year bonds at 3 percent, these have been the only issues offered publicly in the United States by the World Bank.

Lumber Due Today For Work Sheds At White House

Construction of wooden sheds for offices and workshops is due to begin this week on the south lawn of the White House. The lumber is expected to arrive today, officials said yesterday.

It will still be several days, however, before the first workman begins to dig beneath the ancient walls to build the new underpinnings for the Executive Mansion, first step in the $5,500,000 reconstruction job.

Another crew will begin, perhaps next week, to remove paneling, fireplaces and other interior fixtures, some of which will be replaced when the new framework is completed.

U. S. Labor Leaders Press War On Reds at World Conference

London, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Anti-Communist Free Labor Conference adopted the first part of the constitution of a new world labor organization today, pledging it to defend democracy against "any totalitarian aggression."

Labor leaders meeting here to form the new organization selected the title "International Confederation of Free Trade Unions" for the organization set up to challenge the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions.

The new international will formally come into being next Wednesday. It includes the American CIO, AFL and John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers.

The new name and the anti-totalitarian pledge were embodied in a proposed constitution, the first portion of which was adopted today. The conference has been in session for the past week.

The constitution also pledged the free labor group "to protect, maintain and expand the system of free labor and to eliminate forced labor everywhere."

The American delegates, it was understood, had demanded an outright fight against communism, while the British Trades Union Congress sought to soft-pedal the Communist issue in order to avoid too much cleavage in labor ranks.

The confederation's principal aims include the coordination of defense of free trade unions against "campaigns aiming at their destruction and restriction of their rights" and against "infiltration and subjugation by totalitarian or other antilabor forces."

Other aims include the furtherance of economic, social and cultural interests of people in countries suffering from the war, and the promotion of general economic cooperation.

Customs Code Streamlining Likely in 1950, Snyder Says

Secretary of the Treasury Snyder indicated yesterday that Congress will be asked next year to authorize the streamlining of customs methods to promote world trade.

Further big-scale improvements in the customs system can not be made without legislation, he told the opening meeting of a two-day gathering of collectors and appraisers from the 45 United States customs districts.

Snyder added that customs employes can do much to create a "favorable atmosphere" for trade by striving constantly to give improved service and by "meeting importer-exporter problems with sympathetic understanding."

The customs meetings were closed, but the Treasury issued a statement on talks by Snyder, Undersecretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley and Undersecretary of State James E. Webb.

Webb, it said, spoke on "the importance of an expanded trade to this Nation's economy and to world economic betterment."

Foley told about recent meetings of U. S. customs experts with representatives of Britain, Canada, France, Italy and other countries to talk over trade problems arising from customs practices.

Wallace Denies Lewis Charge He Ordered Supplies to Reds is, jr., is the sheerest fabrication. It is part of his unremitting effort to tarnish the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"The board of economic warfare, of which I was chairman, had absolutely nothing to do with any shipments to the Soviet Union. Shipments to the Soviet Union were under Lend-Lease.

"Nothing of this sort ever came up for discussion in any way whatsoever between President Roosevelt and me, or between me and any other member of the administration.

"In justice to Harry Hopkins, I must say that if there were any shipments of uranium abroad, they would have had to have the approval of General Groves."

The radio commentator said the House Un-American Activities Committee had called Groves down to Washington "in the middle of the 'night' late in 1948 to testify behind closed doors about the purported Wallace order late in 1948.

He said Groves' testimony has never been made public.

Groves Won't Make It Public

In Darien, Conn., Groves declined to confirm or deny Lewis' statement about the hearing. Groves said "if it has not been made public, "I'm not going to do it."

"I have appeared before the House committee on I don't know how many occasions," said Groves. "I think all appearances were in executive session.

"I testified at one evening session but it wasn't in the middle of the night. I don't recall whether Wallace's name was mentioned or not. I wouldn't be surprised if it was. I just don't remember."

General Groves was asked if he ever mentioned Wallace's name in connection with uranium shipments to Russia.

"Oh, I wouldn't want to answer that," said Groves.

Didn't Ship Material to Reds

Commenting generally on the Lewis broadcast and Wallace's comment, Groves said:

"I didn't ship any material to Russia. I wasn't responsible for the shipping of any material to Russia. After all, I didn't supervise shipments of material to Russia or the supplying of funds to Russia with which to purchase materials.

"One thing generally overlooked is that I didn't have control of every pound of uranium in the United States. A reasonable amount was used commercially before the war—not a great deal in tons but quite a lot in pounds."

[The United Press quoted General Groves as saying, in regard to the charge he had been "overruled" by Wallace: "Mr. Wallace was not in my chain of command. While he did have extra duties as Vice President, they were not in my chain of command."—Editor's note.]

In his broadcast last night, Lewis said:

"The big question is, who was sufficiently powerful to overrule Gen. Groves, who insisted that the materials must not be given to Russia? Who was it who permitted them to go, in spite of those protests?

"There are specific secret records, available if and when the proper authorities see fit to let the public in on them, and those records reveal exactly who that individual was.

"The individual who overruled Gen. Groves' blockade and ordered the atomic materials sent to Russia in spite of him was the then Vice President of the United States and head of the Bureau of Economic Warfare, later the Communists' candidate for President of the United States—Mr. Henry Agard Wallace."

Mentions "Mr. X" and "Mr. Y"

Lewis referred to two former State Department officials whom he described as the "supposed origin" of confidential State Department documents shipped to Russia during the war. But he only named them as "Mr. X" and "Mr. Y" and said their names were on "little white pieces of paper" which were found by Maj. Jordan inside two of the batches of Russia-bound suitcases inspected by Jordan.

Jordan told the radio audience he had given the real names of "Mr. X" and "Mr. Y" to the House Un-American Activities Committee in a closed session.

"If they care to publish the names," Jordan said, "that is their affair."

Wallace, while he was Vice President, headed the Board of Economic Warfare, which was created to help round up war supplies for the United States and her allies, of whom Russia was one.

Wallace and the then Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones scrapped about policies and President Roosevelt dissolved the BEW in July, 1943. In its place he created the Office of Economic Warfare, under James F. Byrnes.

industrial plants in this country.

Later, in executive session, Jordan gave the committee the names of two former State Department officials which he said appeared on other "suitcase" documents. The committee declined to release the names but began an immediate check of the "authenticity" of Jordan's story.

The State Department, meanwhile, disclosed that it granted licenses for shipment of some atomic materials to Russia in 1943, a year before Jordan said Hopkins directed him to rush such a shipment.

The department said two export licenses for 1400 pounds of unprocessed uranium were approved in March, 1943, and a third license for 25 pounds of uranium metal and 1000 grams of heavy water was issued in November, 1943.

The statement disclosed that Edmund A. Gullion, a special assistant to the Undersecretary of State, advised the committee of the shipments on June 11, 1948.

Louis J. Russell, chief investigator for the committee, gave the committee details of the licensed shipments at an open session before Jordan was summoned. Russell said there was some doubt about whether the third shipment got to Russia.

Asked whether he ever ran across anything linking Hopkins' name with the shipments, Russell replied: "To the best of my knowledge, no."

Hopkins, one of whose over-all assignments was to keep Russia satisfied in the Allied war effort, was frequently called on by the Russians to help speed "priority" shipments piling up at the Great Falls airport, Jordan told the committee.

Although he never saw him personally, and talked to him on the phone only once, the witness said Col. A. N. Kotikov, agent at the airfield for the Russian purchasing mission, frequently sought Hopkins' aid through the Russian Embassy in Washington. He put through several calls to the embassy for Kotikov soliciting such aid, Jordan said.

He said the only time he talked to Hopkins was after Kotikov called the embassy and then handed him the phone to talk to Hopkins direct.

He said Kotikov told him it was about a shipment of "something very important . . . it had to do with 'bomb powder'." Jordan said he immediately associated it with a piece of paper on Kotikov's desk, marked "uranium."

When he picked up the phone Jordan said Hopkins' voice came on and told him to rush the shipment but to say nothing about it even to his superiors.

Representative Morgan M. Moulder (D., Mo.) said Jordan's information seemed to be "presumption based on hearsay" and asked how he knew for a fact he was talking to Hopkins. Jordan replied that he was "sure" it was Hopkins because the man on the phone referred to a shortage of pilots at the field that Hopkins had been personally requested to do something about.

The witness told how the first official Russian passengers for Moscow carried the black leather bags with them and he let them pass unsearched.

He decided to look into them, he said, when the number of suitcases rose to about 50 per plane, with only armed couriers accompanying them.

The Russians bitterly protested that the bags had diplomatic immunity, and threatened to get his job, but he opened the suitcases anyway as a matter of "personal protection," he testified.

The atomic information and other data he found in them had no real meaning to him then, he said, "but I wanted to be ready if the FBI or anyone else questioned me about the shipments."

In the end the FBI did question him, and it was only after FBI agents checked his story that he made public part of it in a radio interview last Friday night, he said.

Jordan testified that he made a special trip to Washington to try to find out whether the Russian suitcases did have diplomatic immunity. He said the State Department never answered the question but War Department officials told him not to "harass" the Russians but to help them all he could.

While here he said he called on Gen. Junius Jones, Army inspector general. Although Jones said yesterday that he didn't recall the meeting, Jordan insisted that he asked Jones to send inspectors to the airport, and later 10 or 12 arrived. He said he did not know what the inspectors said in their report but he thought that they made one.

Jordan said he walked up and down" State Department corridors trying to get an answer to the diplomatic immunity question but gathered only that "they thought I was being too officious and causing trouble."

At the State Department he said he talked to a John Hazzard, whom he identified only as "the chief of the entire outfit."

"He said they knew what was going on and that I was not to worry, but should go back and help the Russianse all I could," said Jordan.

When the suitcases arrived at the field, he said he hastily examined every fourth or fifth one, breaking the sash cord tied around them. The protesting Russian followed him tying them up again "to make it look like they hadn't been opened," he said.

Such notes as he took were on the back of old envelopes and later transferred to the sheet of paper he read to the committee in executive session, he said. In a red-backed diary he also showed the committee were notations on the tonnage and time of shipments to Russia, but no references to the suitcases.

Members asked him why there was no reference in his diary to the material he found in the bags. He said he thought it was because he started the diary in 1944 but started searching the suitcases in 1943.

Earlier, Frank S. Tavenner, committee counsel, questioned the committee's chief investigator, Russell, on the three licensed shipments to Russia. Tavenner asked why the Russians were interested in getting uranium in 1943. Russell advanced these four possible reasons:

1. The Russians then were working on an atomic bomb.
2. The Russians thought that by placing orders for uranium and uranium compounds they might verify their own reports that we were working on the bomb.
3. The Russians wanted to know if we were using all of our uranium output and thereby get some hint of how far our bomb experiments had advanced.
4. The Russians wanted to know more about our uranium supply sources.

Russell read into the record a statement given the committee June 28, 1948, by Herman R. Rosenberg, a New York city broker in chemicals, who handled the Russian requests for atomic materials.

Rosenberg said the Russian requests were the first his company had received for uranium products for any customer. He said his company had to contact manufacturers and dealers and was able to get at least one offer for each of the products.

Russell said that after the first shipment to Russia the Manhattan Engineering Propect "cut off all sources of suply of uranium material in the United States."

Even before Jordan was called before the committee his broadcast story was subject to Nation-wide comment, ranging from sharp contradictions to confirmation in part.

Maj. Gen. James H. Burns expressed belief that Hopkins' record was "clean as a hound's tooth" in directing American Government efforts to aid Russia as a wartime ally. Burns served with Hopkins in 1943 on a top level White House "Soviet protocol committee" which helped form lend-lease policies and divide available American munitions among the Allies.

David Hopkins, son of the President's wartime assistant, called the story "completely incredible." In Los Angeles, he said his father never signed his name "H.H." and said besides was critically ill at the time he was supposed to have talked to Jordan.

Also in Los Angeles, Lieut Col. George F. McNeil said he served as security officer at Great Falls in 1943, was "very close" to Jordan, and "was fully aware that the Russians had a direct lead to the White House."

Former Ferry Command Flier Ben L. Brown said he saw the ropetied suitcases at Great Falls that Jordan described.

Russell L. Meredith, commander of the Great Falls Army Air Base, 1944-45, said: "It might have been so and might not, but I believe most of it is a lot of baloney—Monday morning quarterbacking."

In Fairbanks, Alaska, Brig. Gen. Dale V. Gaffney, who was Jordan's wartime superior, said he was "completely surprised" by Jordan's story, and that no such complaints had ever crossed his desk.

Chematar Says Orders Required No 'Pressure'

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—An export purchasing company official tonight said his firm ordered two small shipments of impure uranium for Russia in 1943 but "no White House intervention or pressure was obtained or indeed necessary."

The statement was made by Manfred Wolkiser, general counsel for Chematar, Inc.

Wolkiser said "There was nothing conspicuous then about this particular Russian order for a small amount of uranium—at a time when we were rushing all available guns, tanks and planes to our ally."

Doesn't Know Hiss, Rosen Tells Court

New York, Dec. 5 (NYHT).—William Rosen, whose name appears in Washington Department of Motor Vehicles and Traffic records as the purchaser of a Ford roadster once owned by Alger Hiss, refused to answer questions about the transaction today when he appeared as a witness in the second perjury trial of Hiss.

All he would say was that he did not know Hiss, and he did not know a man named J. Peters or Stevens, who had also figured in earlier accounts of the transaction.

Rosen said six times in answer to separate questions: "I respectfully decline to answer that question on the grounds that any answer I may give may tend to incriminate me."

To a seventh question—whether he had been a member of the Communist Party in 1936—he refused to answer both on these grounds and under the First Amendment to the Constitution, which he said gave him the right not to reveal his political associations.

Denies Knowing Hiss

Rosen testified that he did not know Hiss, had never talked to him or had any dealings or negotiations with him, and had seen him only once before, when both were in the United States Courthouse on Foley Square at the same time last October 10.

Rosen's name came into the Hiss trial as a result of conflicting stories told by Hiss and Whittaker Chambers of the disposition of a 1929 Ford. Hiss said he gave it to Chambers in 1936; Chambers said that Hiss insisted on giving it to the Communist Party for the use of "some poor organizer on the West Coast."

From Washington a title transfer certificate was obtained showing the signatures of Hiss transferring title to the Cherner Motor Co., and an official of that company transferring title to Rosen the same day. Hiss and a company official have both acknowledged their signatures.

Credibility Test

Hiss is under an indictment alleging that he perjured himself when he denied that he had ever given secret Government documents and copies and summaries of such documents to Chambers. Chambers, who produced the documents in November, 1948, accused Hiss of giving them to him.

The car enters the case as a means of testing the credibility of the accuser and the defendant.

Earlier today Claude B. Cross, attorney for Hiss, and Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas F. Murphy completed their questioning of Walter H. Anderson, chief of the records branch of the State Department, who brought documents from the State Department files coresponding to the spy papers brought by Chambers.

Though Cross succeeded in showing on cross-examination that many of the documents concerned apparently never reached Hiss' desk, Murphy showed on redirect examination that some of them might have after all.

Coffee Price Rise Traced

the coffee at half a cent a jar less than they could replace it. Also, he said, there had been other increases by the wholesaler, besides the 6½-cent one.

Anderson furnished a chart showing how coffee prices have advanced since September 1.

Brand.	Wholesale Sept.	Wholesale Dec.	Retail Sept.	Retail Dec.
	(Cents per pound)
Maxwell House	52.75	75.66	58	82
Chase & Sanborn	52	73	58	82
Sanka	57.25	80.66	63	89
Wilkins	51	74	57	77
Edwards	49	72	55	75
Nob Hill	43	60	46	63
Airway	39	56	42	59
Nescafe	98.75	1.2125	1.15	1.29

Much of the blame for the rapid jump in coffee prices was blamed on (1) the press, (2) the housewives, (3) wholesalers, and (4) the retailers, by the president of the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

John C. Gardner, exchange head, added that most of the blame was on newspapers.

Gardner denied that speculators were responsible. They, he said, have been "fighting the market rather than profiting on rising prices."

Housewives Hoarded

Newspapers, he said, printed scare stories about coffee shortages. He referred to a story predicting $1 coffee by January 1.

Then, he said, housewives start hoarding, and retailers and wholesalers, to protect themselves, buy larger inventories than they need. The result, he said, is an artificial shortage.

Gillette, in a statement before the hearing, blamed speculators, wholesalers and retailers.

"Since the speculators, foreign and domestic, were successful in driving the price of coffee upward about 20 cents a pound, retail prices have bounded upward in equal amount," Gillette said.

"These increased prices by the wholesalers and retailers return to them profits far and above their normal margins."

Woman, Two Men Held in Bond on Narcotics Charges

Three persons charged with narcotics law violations were arraigned yesterday before U. S. Commissioner C. S. Lawrence.

Mrs. Juanita Varn, 37, in whose rented room at 921 G pl. nw. the three were arrested Saturday, waived hearing and was held for grand jury action under $500 bond.

She is charged with forging and uttering a narcotics prescription. John Wilson Limerick, of uncertain address, held on similar charges, and Charles F. Alexander, 874 Yuma st. se., had their cases continued until December 14. Bond was set at $500 on Alexander and $1000 on Limerick. Alexander is charged with illegal possession and with receiving and concealing narcotics.

Pentagon Fine Appeal Is Lost By Secretary

A former Wac who contested a $2 traffic fine incurred at the Pentagon, lost the appeal of her case in Federal District Court at Alexandria yesterday. See is Mrs. Arvilla C. Johnson, 43, of 2109 F st. nw., a Pentagon secretary.

She pleaded her own appeal before Federal Judge Albert E. Bryan, who told her it would be valid only if there were errors in law, and he found none. She declared that a Pentagon guard who gave her the ticket for improper walking conldn't have seen her commit the offense, and that there were no warning signs.

Mine Owners Defy Lewis

demned the three-day week. He said:

"This new edict is a usurpation of the basic function of management—the right of employers to operate their mines in accordance with sound business judgment. It is a clear illustration of the reasons why we do not intend to bow to dictation, which if continued, can only wreck the entire coal industry."

Hard Coal Talks Will Resume Today

New York, Dec. 5 (NYHT).—Negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the anthracite mine operators, who employ 78,000 of John L. Lewis' men in eastern Pennsylvania will be resumed here Tuesday.

A joint committee composed of 10 UMW officials and 10 operators is scheduled to meet for the first time since July 7 at Philadelphia. Usually, the anthracite negotiations follow soft coal talks. But since no contracts have been signed so far this year between Lewis and the soft coal operators, the hard coal negotiations are attracting more than usual interest.

dormitory, Boykin said, "Every effort will be made to find other accommodations equal to what they have now." He was asked whether the dormitory could be left and still have the Freedom Fair, and he said if it had to be done that way, "I'd try to do it."

Only a part of the area taken up by the present buildings cuts into the United States buildings planned. But a major part of the area scheduled for amusement, restaurants, and other service facilities coincides with that now occupied by the existing buildngs.

Boykin pointed out that the United States buildings are the main ones in which space is to be sold to finance the Sesquicentennial. He said the layout now planned for them cannot be changed—and if those buildings are taken out, there can be no Freedom Fair. He said the plan could not be changed and still meet the opening date, July 4, 1950.

by his son, Robert Vernon, in a new black Cadillac.

The former Congressman transferred quickly to the marshal's car, and they drove directly to the prison.

Discussed Heart

On the nine-mile drive back through this city, Moore said the former Congressman complained of his heart, and reiterated his innocence.

Previously, before newsmen set up a watch in his home city of Prestonsburg, some 60 miles southeast of here, May slipped away yesterday morning and drove here to spend the night with friends.

He had been absent from church yesterday, breaking a habit of long standing, and when lights remained on in his Prestonsburg home all night last night, newsmen were led to believe he might be ill.

In his final appeal to escape prison, before Federal Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut in Washington, D. C., last Thursday, counsel for the former Congressman pleaded for leniency because of a cardiac condition, his age, failing hearing and eyesight and virtual impoverishment.

His attorney said that May's defense had cost more than $44,000.

At the same time, Judge Schweinhaut rejected an appeal from the brothers, Henry and Murray Garsson, who were convicted with May for using his influence as the House military leader for profit.

May was charged with accepting $53,000 from the Garssons, the operators of a Midwest munitions empire, for getting War Department favors for them.

High Court Sets Tidelands Case for Feb. 5

cision probably will be given by a seven-man bench.

In other actions yesterday, the Supreme Court:

1. Upheld unanimously an Arkansas law forbidding use of force and violence to keep workers from their jobs. Justice Jackson made it clear, however, the court was "not called upon to decide whether a State has power to criminate by his mere presence an innocent member of a group when some individual without his encouragement or concert commits an act of violence."

Jackson said there was no abridgment of free speech or assembly involved in the case where criminal penalties were leveled against those who, in the law's language, were "promoting and encouraging, and aiding in assemblage, the purpose of which is to wreak violence." One striker was killed in a melee between strikers and nonstrikers at an Arkansas factory gate.

Refuses Ruling on Oath

2. Refused, almost unanimously, to rule on the validity of a Los Angeles County loyalty oath because of what Justice Frankfurter, in the opinion, called "decent respect for California and its courts" where litigation is still under way. Some 16 county employes were discharged for refusing to sign the loyalty oath.

3. Ruled against the Government in two antitrust cases. In a case involving the Yellow Cab Co. the court held, 5 to 2, the Government was asking in effect a new trial of a case lost in the lower courts. The high court also refused to order a mass trial for 84 defendants in a Texas small loan case. This was the one in which the Government had accused Federal Judge Ben H. Rice, jr., of "an abuse of judicial power" in requiring separate trials.

4. Agreed to consider the powers of the Nation's civil courts over court-martial convictions. The case involved an American soldier convicted by murder by an Army court in Germany. The Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans upheld the soldier, declaring his court-martial was "replete with high prejudicial errors and irregularities" and that he did not get a fair trial "even under military law."

5. Ruled, 6 to 2, that the Wagner labor law permitted firing of workers who tried to switch union representation in their plant despite a closed-shop agreement. Justice Minton, for the court, said the National Labor Relations Board was achieving an end by its rulings that Congress had refused to enact into law. The Taft-Hartley law subsequently banned closed-shop agreements, a type of labor contract that Minton yesterday characterized as protecting "the integrity of the union" and providing "stability to labor relations."

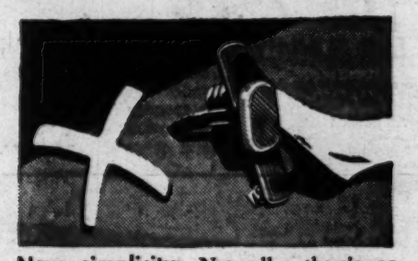
Packard Ultramatic Drive

Impartial, independent technical observers gave us the idea for the name . . .

At the Packard proving grounds, they reviewed the basic principles of this new Packard automatic drive . . . heard about the 16-year development and test program behind it. They drove it themselves . . . compared its performance with that of other leading types of drives. Then, out of their own experience, they told us:

"The best way to describe this Packard drive is to say it's the last word in automatic, no-shift control!"

Come in—see for yourself!



New simplicity: Naturally, there's no clutch pedal . . . and no gear-shifting. And that's only the first hint of the convenience of Packard Ultramatic Drive!

New smoothness, new quietness. No jerking, because there's no gear-shifting. No "racing engine" sensation, because there's no slippage at cruising speeds.

New economy: Ultramatic Drive saves gas—because there's no slippage at cruising speeds. And thanks to its advanced design, it requires no complicated maintenance.

New safety: No chance of involuntary "down-shifts," which might cause a prolonged skid on slippery pavement. Smooth engine braking power, when wanted.

More responsive: No lag, at traffic speeds or highway speeds, waiting for gears to shift. For instant bursts of safety-sprint acceleration—just "tramp down."

More positive, more flexible: Your choice of high-range, or low-range operation. Easy shift from forward to reverse. Yes, you can rock the car in snow!

Justice Dept. Postpones Non-Communist Affidavit Test Case; Indictments of Union Officials as Falsifiers Will Be Sought

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

In a move to build up an airtight case, the Justice Department has had to postpone its plans to seek indictments next week against certain union officials accused of falsely signing non-Communist affidavits under the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Justice Department had scheduled its first case for presentation to a Federal Grand Jury for December 12, but because of the difficulty of amassing strong evidence of affidavit falsification, has put off the proceedings to sometime in January.

Between 25 and 50 affidavits of officers in five CIO left-wing unions have been sent to the Justice Department for investigation and possible prosecution by Robert Denham general counsel to the National Labor Relations Board.

The five unions include the United Electrical Workers, recently ousted from the CIO for pro-Communist policies; American Communications Association; United Furniture Workers; Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; and Food, Tobacco and Agricultural Workers, which are facing the CIO trial board and almost certain ouster from the CIO.

The NLRB has not publicized the names of the officials whose unions are under scrutiny. However, there have been newspaper announcements involving the names of several of the more prominent alleged pro-Communists in the union movement.

Among these are Julius Emspak and James J. Matles; Max Perlow of the United Furniture Workers; Donald Henderson of FTA, and Maurice Travis of Mine, Mill.

Last June, Perlow, who is secretary-treasurer of the UFW, announced he had quit the Communist Party in order to sign the non-Communist affidavit, required under the Taft-Hartley Act of all officers of a union which wishes to make use of the NLRB election system.

Left-wing unions had until that time refused to sign the affidavits, and thereby were unable to participate in representation elections among employes of various companies. The result permitted rival right-wing unions to capture the elections.

Several right-wing unions which opposed the affidavit on grounds of principle that the oath was not required of employers—have for the most part signed up in order to participate in the NLRB elections. The United Mine Workers is chief among the right-wing unions which have thus far refused to sign the affidavits.

The affidavit requires the union official to swear that he is not a member of the Communist Party, or affiliated with such a party, and that he neither believes in nor is a member of or supports any organization which believes in or teaches the overthrow of the American Government by illegal or unconstitutional means.

Chief problem for the Justice Department is to produce legal evidence that any of the suspected union officials violated the oath after signing it.

Vatican Planning Rites to Open 1950 Holy Year

Rome, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Vatican City has issued formal invitations to Cardinals for the December 12 consistory at which Pope Pius XII will appoint three Cardinals to open the doors of Rome's three major churches, ushering in the Holy Year.

The doors are opened once every 25 years, on Christmas Eve, then sealed with bricks at the end of each jubilee.

The bricks actually are removed in advance by workmen under the direction of high Vatican prelates and a temporary door is constructed.

Private ceremonies are held at the demolitions and the Vatican Secretariat of State said the ceremony for the door of St. Peters, which the Pope himself will open, will be December 14.

When the Pope opens the doors of St. Peters, his papal legates will open the holy doors at St. Mary Major, St. Pauls Outside the Walls and St. John Lateran.

Peeresses Seek Seats in House

London, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Britain's "blue blood" peeresses assailed the Labor Government today for refusing to allow them to sit in the present House of Lords.

They claimed they have as much right to a seat as American women in Congress.

Baroness Ravensdale, whose mother was the daughter of the late Levi Leiter of Washington, D. C., and Chicago, said:

"This is a great letdown and we are going all-out to get the Prime Minister to extend the hereditary principle in the house to us."

Lady Ravensdale said that the majority of Conservative peers were against women peeresses sitting with them in the house, but contended Labor and Liberal peers "did not mind."

Plants' Secret Of Hydrogen Output Probed

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 5 (AP).—If your garden would grow hydrogen, instead of lettuce, tomatoes and other food, you wouldn't need atomic energy.

You would have something better than coal, gas, oil and gasoline.

Your garden probably does generate hydrogen, but never turns it loose.

The secret of this plant hydrogen process is the goal of a new research at the University of Illinois. If chemists can discover this, then water might become the world's main fuel and power source. For water is two-thirds hydrogen, and the plants make their hydrogen from water.

This study, called the photosynthetic research project, is directed by Robert Emerson, Ph. D., and Eugene I. Rabinowitch, Ph. D., both research professors.

In World War I an auto ran on the streets of Chicago powered with hydrogen from water. But extracting hydrogen is too costly by any process known to science.

The plants make their hydrogen by photosynthesis—by using the energy in light. They combine the hydrogen with carbon dioxide to make carbohydrates. This production line leads to all our foods and to all our fuels, except energy. But it is long and complicated.

Many researchers now think it possible that splitting off the hydrogen from water is the first step, and that this step could be separated from the others.

The Illinois study centers on the action of light. Light is composed of waves, or packets of energy, called quanta. The quanta work like little sticks of dynamite. Just as a certain number of dynamite sticks is needed to split a rock, a certain number of light quanta is needed to split the hydrogen from water. This splitting is done in single molecules. The study is difficult because there is no way of seeing a single molecule.

But there is reason to believe that the amount of light needed to make hydrogen will not be costly.

Children's Hospital Reports Best Year

The board of directors of Children's Hospital here met in annual session yesterday, and was given cause to cheer.

For the first time in years, the hospital president reported that Children's did not have to dip into reserve funds to meet its operating expenses.

The directors also took under consideration recommendations by Dr. Joseph S. Wall, chief of the medical staff, that the hospital add to its present facilities a rheumatic fever clinic, a cerebral palsy clinic, new isolation facilities for polio patients, and greater development of its tumor board for childhood cancers.

The board also announced that the hospital would soon ask for bids on its two-million-dollar rebuilding and expansion program. Groundbreaking is now scheduled for February.

The glowing picture of the hospital's finances was contained in the report of James H. Lemon, president of the hospital board of directors. It was given in his absence by Wilson B. Nairn, first vice president.

"From the standpoint of income," the president's report stated, "our picture is encouraging, since, for the first time in years, it met out-of-pocket expenses and made possible some long-delayed rehabilitation of the physical plant and furnishings and the purchase of a small amount of necessary equipment."

The board president credited "internal economies" by department heads for taking the hospital out of the red.

Board members said they couldn't recall a financial report as encouraging as yesterday's for "years and years."

Dr. Wall, asking for a "Clinic for the Hearts of Children," said such a clinic would not only fight rheumatic fever and its aftermath, rheumatic heart disease, but could also provide facilities for heart surgery for congenital defects, such as those which cause "blue babies."

"We now possess on our active staff surgeons capable of extending such expert services to our children," Dr. Wall declared.

He told the board members that advances in neurology and neurological surgery have created a virtual demand for a special clinic to treat and rehabilitate children with cerebral palsy, and asked that such a clinic be set up.

Also, he said, "should finances permit," the erection of a "suitable" poliomyelitis ward in the new building "would greatly relieve the disorganization of the ward service, which now is an unfortunate annual occurrence."

Finally, he said, the hospital tumor board, concerned with the detection and treatment of cancer in children, should be developed more fully to prepare it for the time "in the not-too-distant future" when "research will find an answer to the mystery and fatality associated with cancer in the young."

The annual statistical reports presented yesterday showed that the hospital serviced 82,284 dispensary visits for ailing children and 10,471 visits to its Child Welfare Department, the preventive medicine branch of service. The figures compare to 75,329 and 11,224 of the previous year.

The hospital admitted 8998 patients during the year as compared to 7709 in the preceding year. Finally, the report showed, the hospital had cut its average length of patient stay to 5.4 days, almost two days less than the average of 7.1 days of the previous report year.

Truman Gratified

Benton Given Senate Seat By Bowles

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Former Assistant Secretary of State William Benton was appointed to the United States Senate today by his former advertising agency partner, Gov. Chester Bowles.

The 49-year-old Southport businessman was named to fill the unexpired term of Senator Raymond E. Baldwin, who will become a State Supreme Court Justice December 19. The term has little more than a year to run.

Benton is listed as an independent, but in accepting the appointment he said: "I shall, of course, take my place on the Democratic side of the Senate."

Benton and Bowles both quit the advertising agency they formed 20 years ago and became Government officials. President Truman persuaded Benton to quit as vice president and assistant to the chancellor of the University of Chicago and go to Washington in September, 1945, as Assistant Secretary of State.

He remained in Washington two years, helping organize America's peacetime program of international information.

'Scandalous,' Says Dr. Crain Of Blue Plains

The District's facilities for hospitalization of chronically ill persons are half what they should be, Dr. Darrell C. Crain, Washington physician, told the Washington Hearing Society at its annual meeting last night.

Chairman of a Community Chest committee which surveyed needs for chronic and convalescent patients, Dr. Crain said conditions at the Home for the Aged at Blue Plains are "scandalous."

The society, whose headquarters are at 2431 14th st. nw., elected four directors to three-year terms:

H. Richard McCamant, vocational rehabilitation officer in charge of the handicapped, Civil Service Commission; Walter W. Britt, director of the Washington Federation of Churches; Joseph Ball, retiring society president, and Paul Pernecky, jr., accountant with the Maritime Commission.

Appointment of Dr. Irvin Hantman and Alice Lane, of radio station WOOK, to fill board vacancies also was announced.

Ha-ha! Radio Final Refuge Of Wisecrack, Says Cerf; Ho-ho!

Except in radio, the wisecrack is on the way out, Bennett Cerf, New York publisher, columnist and humorist, told an audience of more than 1500 in Constitution Hall last night.

"In 1944 we were at the crest of the wisecrack school of humor, the humor that obtained its laugh at someone's expense," Cerf said, recalling Dorothy Parker and Alexander Woollcott.

"The humor of insult was taken over lock, stock and barrel by radio," Cerf said, "and radio will probably continue to use it as long as it will hold an audience. "But wisecracking humor is taking something of a back seat, though it will probably survive because it is indigenous to America."

Replacing the wisecrack in popularity, he said is a "kind of nostalgic humor" involving "the humor of situation and reminding you of people."

Sounding a sober note at the end of his joke-studded address, Cerf said that because of the rapidity with which jokes spread across the country "they are the greatest way of disseminating propaganda," and urged that we "stop and look at a joke with a clear eye to see if in telling it we are spreading someone's dirty work."

Sawyer Urges New Liberalism For 'Fabulous' Living Standard

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer said tonight that the United States can have a "fabulously high standard of living" in the next 50 years if it adopts an economic policy of "new liberalism."

Sawyer, in a speech before the Public Relations Society of America, said the basic idea of new liberalism is balance.

"It is the idea," he said, "that there is a middle ground which is best for all in the long run."

The main problem facing this country, he said, is how to divide the results of United States production equitably among consumers, labor, management, capital, agriculture and the Government.

Sawyer said this Nation produces on the average 3 percent more in goods and services each year and that if it continues, national production by the year 2000 will be more than a trillion dollars.

"We can reach this goal and produce a fabulously high standard of living in America if at all times we keep the interests of all the major groups in balance," he said.

Sawyer urged that the people of this country pay less attention to communism and more attention to strengthening their own institutions.

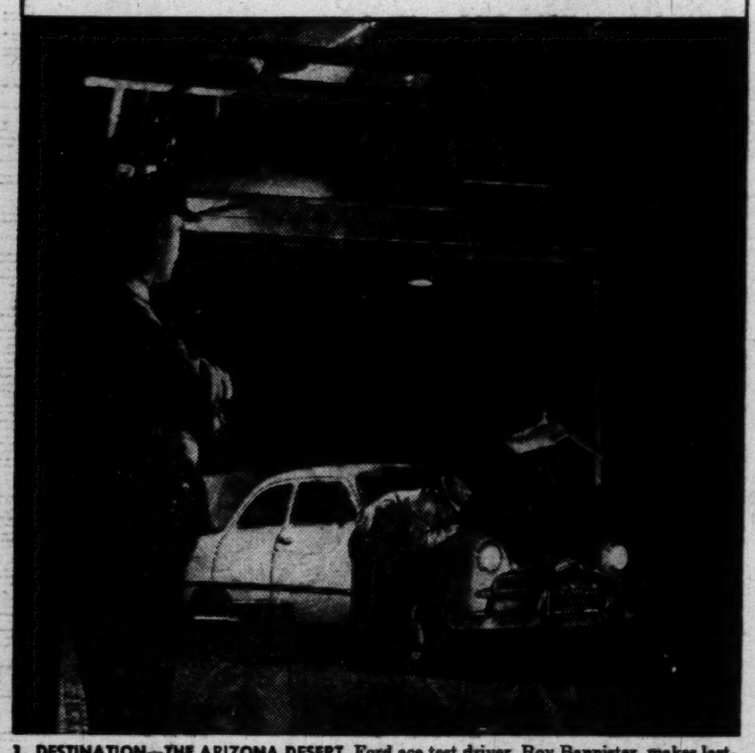
"CLOAK AND DAGGER" CAR IN ARIZONA

WHAT'S GOING ON AT FORD



1. DESTINATION—THE ARIZONA DESERT. Ford ace test driver, Roy Bannister, makes last-minute preparations. His test car, masquerading as a '49 Ford, carries new secret parts and features developed by Ford. He'll drive halfway across the nation to test those features in the Arizona desert. Object of trip: to bring back performance facts that will help build better Fords.

RIGHT NOW, somewhere on the sands near the Estrella Mountains in Arizona, an innocent-looking car is secretly testing a whole collection of new automotive features.

Why? Unusually high temperature there, plus primitive road conditions and corrosive alkali dust can be counted on to duplicate in just a few weeks, the effect of years of ordinary driving.

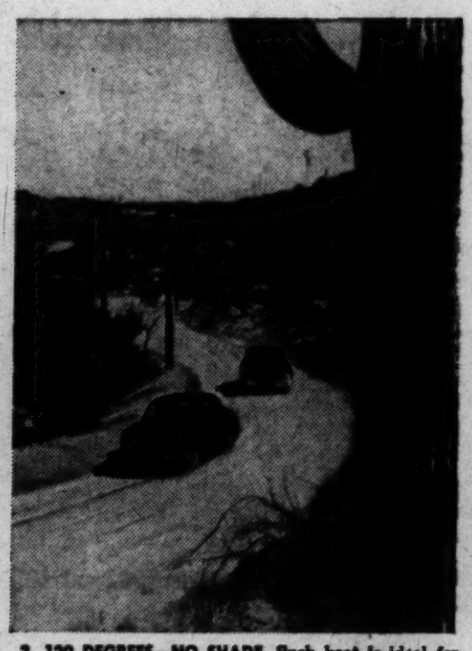
This research brings better Ford products, and it goes on continually, not only in Arizona but everywhere else in the U.S.A.—in the city, in the mountains, in the depths of man-made "blizzards"—with Lincolns and Mercurys as well as Fords.

For almost half a century, Ford, Mercury and Lincoln cars and Ford trucks and tractors have been giving outstanding service all over the world—from Alaska to Zanzibar. They have won a world-wide reputation for dependability. Continual testing helped create that good reputation, and is helping to increase it today. Ford experience, skill, and ingenuity build better products. Ford testing proves them.

It's part of the Ford way of doing business . . . making the best possible products in the best possible way . . . to benefit producer, consumer, and the nation as a whole.

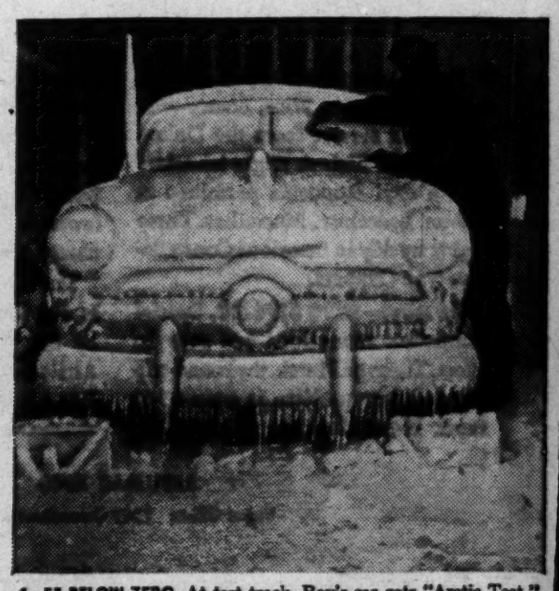
4. THE OLD AND THE NEW. Indian family watches Roy adjust "Fifth Wheel." Device makes super-accurate measurements in fuel economy and speed tests. Estrella Mountains challenge new engine with really tough climbing. Ford will find out how engine climbs—to benefit a million new Ford owners. They may never drive in such mountains, but if they want to, they can.

2. ENGINEER'S "DREAM STUFF." Looks like enough instruments to fly the Atlantic—but they're all necessary to Roy's report. Every feature must be "road-tested" under severest conditions before it can go into new model Fords. Ford wants—and gets—the facts. Ford knowledge, skill, and imagination produce new features. Ford testing proves their worth.



3. 120 DEGREES—NO SHADE. Such heat is ideal for testing carburetor and radiator. Sand and alkali dust quickly put years of wear on vital parts. Fords, Mercurys and Lincolns are punished to improve new models.

5. "A WONDERFUL TRIP," says Roy, as he brings back 35 pages of facts gained on 26,000 miles of traveling. Results show up in Ford cars for 1950, '51 and years to come. Ford testing pays off in better cars for millions.



6. 55 BELOW ZERO. At test track, Roy's car gets "Arctic Test," goes through water-bath tests, races for hours over all kinds of roads, brakes hundreds of times. Result: only proven features go into new models. That's the Ford way of doing business.

AMA Chief Wants Own Europe Study

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

An American Medical Association mission to Europe was proposed yesterday by the AMA president as the latest move in its fight against Federal health insurance.

The bitter fight of the American Medical Health Association against President Truman's plan for compulsory health insurance is expected to be the key subject at the sessions of the AMA's House of Delegates starting here today.

The AMA head, Dr. Ernest I. Irons of Chicago, disclosed he favors sending a delegation of doctors to Europe to study health programs and gather factual data. The Federal Government already has a mission overseas.

Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, leading spokesman for President Truman's health program and thus the chief AMA target, left Thursday with a group of four top aides, for a two-month study of "educational, health and security systems" of Britain, Ireland, Sweden, Switzerland, Italy and Israel.

May Invite Observers

Dr. Irons, who will preside at the four-day session of the AMA beginning here this morning, indicated the proposed study would gather ammunition for a rebuttal to Ewing. He said the matter is in the hands of the board of trustees.

It was learned that the board, in considering the project, has discussed the possibility of including several neutral observers such as newspapermen on the mission.

Dr. Irons would not comment on whether plans were for a study of the same six countries visited by Ewing but indicated this was likely.

Ewing's group is scheduled to stop at London, Dublin, Edinburgh, Stockholm, Bern, Geneva, Rome and Tel Aviv.

To Get 'Other Side'

At a luncheon in the Statler Hotel yesterday, Dr. Elmer L. Henderson of Louisville, AMA president-elect, declared the selection of Washington for this meeting was related to the health insurance fight.

He promised reporters they would "get something different here" than the "political viewpoint" on the health program. "You will get the other side of the picture while we're here," Dr. Henderson declared. He takes over the presidency in June.

This view was seconded by John Bach, director of AMA press relations. Bach said that "in the old days medicine had to battle ignorance and superstition" but the fight today is against "stifling legislation."

He said it was the AMA's "fervent hope that if a new house of medicine is to be built the cornerstone should be one of freedom—freedom for the patient to select the physician and freedom for the physician to treat his patient in the way he was taught."

Due to Retire Fishbein

Another—and even more violent opponent of the Administration's health program—Dr. Morris Fishbein, retiring editor of the AMA Journal, is due to be given his farewell today when the AMA house of delegates acts on his letter of resignation. The session starts at 10 a. m. at the Statler.

Dr. Fishbein was in Washington yesterday to attend an American Red Cross meeting at the Hotel Washington, but he did not attend the AMA luncheon. Officers and trustees of the AMA were introduced, as was Fishbein's successor on the Journal, Dr. Austin Smith, his former assistant.

Another item on today's delegates' agenda is a report of the coordinating committee on this year's campaign to raise funds to fight the Administration program, its future plans and a proposed increase in AMA membership dues.

drops to 88 percent, and after cancer has spread to distant parts of the body, 50 percent of the cases, will die within a year, he said.

Dr. Carl Wilbur, service director of ACS, said that the estimated death toll of 17,500 a year from breast cancer can well be cut to 5000.

Dr. Ernest B. Howard, assistant general manager and secretary of the American Medical Association, presided at yesterday's film premiere. He promised full AMA support to the campaign.

"There is a tendency to forget, in this preoccupation on compulsory health insurance, that there are some problems on which there is no controversey," Dr. Howard declared. "The problems of cancer, however, are one and the same to all of us."

Earlier yesterday, officials of the AMA met with some 40 science writers and news reporters assigned to cover activities of the clinical sessions for general practitioners and the business meetings of organized medicine.

Dr. Henry R. Viets of Boston, chairman of AMA's council on the scientific assembly, told the luncheon group that the clinical sessions will probably be more valuable to the doctors than newsworthy.

The session, third annual midyear meeting of the AMA, he emphasized, is designed for family doctors, to refresh them on standard practices of diagnosis and treatment.

"The sessions," Dr. Viets explained, "will largely be summaries for the general practitioners on what has been accepted and is acceptable in the practice of medicine."

Among medical advances to be stressed, he said, are "the great change in the attitude toward psychiatry," the widening field of physical medicine and rehabilitation, late findings in virus-caused diseases, and the newest work with hormone compounds. Cortisone and ACTH, in arthritis, rheumatic heart disease and other crippling and killing ills.

The Plot Thins

The latest in the spate of atomic spy thrillers is designed to suggest that Harry Hopkins, the most trusted of President Roosevelt's lieutenants, betrayed his country during the war. Even among those to whom this fantasy is congenial, the evidence presented by G. Racey Jordan and his exploiters must seem extremely thin. Mr. Jordan, an Army captain stationed at Great Falls, Mont., in 1943-44, says that the Russians flew lend-lease planes from there loaded with State Department documents, blueprints, uranium and "bomb powder." This, of course, is supposed to explain how the Russians developed an atomic explosion in 1949.

Even the factual portions of this dramatic narrative disintegrate into triviality when examined. It is not news that small quantities of uranium were shipped to Russia under State Department licenses before the Manhattan Engineering District clamped down on such shipments and before anyone outside the MED knew that this ore was the source material of atomic energy. The Un-American Activities Committee scored headlines out of this disclosure two years ago. It is well known, too, that the Russians were given lend-lease planes and flew them from Great Falls, via Alaska, to the Soviet Union at a time when their country was an ally of the United States against a common enemy. Undoubtedly they were given a lot of blueprints along with lend-lease material to help them exterminate Germans on the eastern front. They made some very good use of this stuff.

It may be, moreover, that Harry Hopkins, whose greatest wartime service was the expediting of lend-lease, expedited it at Great Falls when an officious captain went about breaking the seals of Soviet diplomatic pouches and constituting himself a one-man bottleneck. Harry Hopkins was very intent at that time on helping his country win a war against Germany. But the suggestion that Harry Hopkins was deliberately and without authorization giving away vital secrets of the United States to the Russians or to anyone else runs so counter to the man's whole character and record that it must be altogether incredible to reasonable men.

Now that Captain Jordan's far-fetched charges have been made public, it would be well for the sake of history to have a thorough investigation of them by the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy. Chairman McMahon has already said that he will undertake this chore. His probing ought to be thorough enough to expose the motives of the spinners of these spy stories if they are found to have no substance, as we suspect is the case.

Free Labor

In the spirit of accommodation and compromise that characterizes free men, delegates from the labor movements of 81 Western nations and colonies have been meeting in London to establish a new non-Communist labor international. This Free World Labor Conference is a response to the Communist domination of the World Federation of Trade Unions. The American CIO and the British Trades Union Congress joined the WFTU hopefully when it was founded in 1945 but discovered, as the governments of their respective countries have discovered, that collaboration with people behind the iron curtain was an impossibility. The new international organization is said to represent some 45 million workers in countries where labor unions are something more than puppets of an authoritarian state.

It is significant and heartening that the AFL and the United Mine Workers, as well as the CIO, are represented in the conference at London. They have been working, apparently, in close harmony and have won jointly a key position in the determination of policy. There have been sharp differences of opinion among the delegates, but these have been dealt with through democratic debate. The most important controversy has been resolved in favor of the American position, opposed by the British and most of the European Socialist unions, to admit European Catholic trade unions into the organization. With this problem out of the way, the establishment of a permanent international body seems assured.

A world organization of free labor unions can make itself immensely useful in the promotion of improved working conditions in all the participating countries. Through discussion of common problems and cooperation among its constituents, it can be a powerful force in devising better techniques for labor-management relations. And it can serve, precisely because it will be independent of any governmental control, as one of the most effective bulwarks against the spread of communism.

New Liberalism

Close on the heels of the Administration's new educational approach to the problem of monopoly, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer has given the country a revised and refreshing economic credo. Mr. Sawyer's speech in New York last night puts flesh on the bare bones of the Fair Deal, and the creature is by no means so ogreish as sometimes made out. In outlining "the new liberalism," Mr. Sawyer cuts through some of the doctrinaire distortions of liberalism that have paraded under its name. What he calls for is a balance between economic groups built on "open-mindedness, flexibility and a constant reference to the facts."

Business already has cause to be friendly to Mr. Sawyer, a businessman himself, for relaxing the hostility that sometimes has characterized the Administration. Understanding, not hostility, is the keynote of the new efforts to coordinate governmental action on monopoly and restraint of trade. Probably nowhere in industry's relations with government has there been so much confusion as in this field. Consequently, there is much reassurance in Mr. Sawyer's recognition that most businessmen want to obey the law and in his stress on efforts to define just what the law permits. One businessman observed of the new friendliness, "It's heaven, just sheer heaven!"

There also is reassurance for business in Mr. Sawyer's economic philosophy. It is built around the idea of modest profits in an ever-expanding market, which he terms the only really radical idea in the world. He sees a constantly increasing standard of living if the country can maintain its average growth in production of 3 percent a year. But, he notes, "no one group should demand for itself an increase out of all proportion to such growth." Moreover, he hits at the notion that an increase in purchasing power for one group is good no matter what its effect on other groups. "To assume," he said, " . . . that we can continue at all times and all places to increase the share of the worker and the farmer without concern for the need of capital savings and the incentive of the businessman is out of keeping with the liberal attitude."

Mr. Sawyer has no pat formula for resolving the issues between the giant economic groups, but he does stress the Government's responsibility to provide statistics as a basis for straight thinking. With an almost direct slap at the United Mine Workers fiasco, he emphasizes that any pension plan not actuarially sound is a fraud. Here again facts are of the utmost importance, and he believes that the facts respecting the unequal abilities of large and small businesses to pay pensions point to more rather than less Government participation.

It is now a truism that, as Secretary Sawyer puts it, "The best safeguard against the growth of communism is the growth of our economy and the participation of all our people in the benefits of our increasing power to produce." But it is a truism that deserves greater emphasis in this day of preoccupation with the phony dogma of the class struggle. The new liberalism can contribute to political as well as economic progress as it focuses attention on cooperation and balance instead of division.

Credit Control Policy

It would be inexcusable to finance the looming 1950 deficit at very low interest rates if inflationary pressures should again arise, in the judgment of Marriner S. Eccles. In that case, he says in a letter to the joint congressional committee investigating monetary credit and fiscal policies, the Federal Reserve Banks would have to put new money into circulation and become "simply an engine of inflation" at a time when monetary and credit restraints would be required.

Mr. Eccles' comment is an explanation of the inevitable effect of subordinating credit policy to debt management policies. It has nothing to do with the comparatively unimportant question of whether Treasury and Federal Reserve officials work together harmoniously. As a matter of fact, it is well known that their relations are often strained. That is neither surprising nor alarming. Such tensions are bound to develop whenever the policy of any Government agency affects the policy of another agency. The really significant fact to keep in mind is that Federal Reserve officials cooperated 100 percent with the Treasury in carrying out the war financing program and have continued to cooperate since the war by supporting the Treasury's low-interest policy and stabilizing the Government bond market.

To be sure, cooperation appears to have been rather one-sided. For, according to Mr. Eccles, decisions in regard to financing operations have generally been made by the Treasury with a view to borrowing as cheaply as possible, suggestions of Federal Reserve officials often being ignored. In the absence of any legislative directive to pursue independent credit policies, Mr. Eccles rightly concludes that the Federal Reserve System must back up Treasury decisions and support the bond market, even if such action makes it impossible for it to function effectively as a credit control agency. An intolerable situation would arise if these two important agencies were to work at cross-purposes. No central banking system could long survive, or rather its official heads would soon depart, if it did not recognize an obligation to support the policies of the Administration and its executive agencies.

Mr. Eccles suggests three possible methods of extricating the Federal Reserve System from its present difficulties. Congress might (1) assign full responsibility for monetary and credit policy to the Treasury; (2) give the Reserve System additional powers of control over bank reserve requirements, and (3) authorize the Reserve System to determine monetary and credit policies in accordance with the objectives of the Employment Act of 1946, requiring the Treasury to take that mandate into account in making its own debt management decisions.

The first proposal can hardly be taken seriously, except as a means of underlining the comparative impotence at present of the Federal Reserve System as a credit control instrumentality. The second, however, is one that Mr. Eccles has long been urging as a means of curbing monetization of the Government debt through sales of securities to the Reserve Banks—a process that builds up bank reserves and provides a basis for multiple credit expansion. He has favored a plan to set up special reserves consisting of Government securities, in case of need, as a means of immobilizing part of the bank-held Government debt. The third suggestion—statutory definition of the objectives of credit policy—would, in our opinion, be utterly infeasible. As Chairman McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board has pointed out, this sort of statutory guide would probably be "so rigid as to defeat its purpose, since the making of decisions on monetary policy calls at all times for weighing of a great many different factors and for the attaching of different weights to the same factor at different times."

The hearings have revealed the pressing need for legislation to strengthen the Reserve System's control over private credit without involving it in conflicts with the Treasury. Cooperation between Treasury and Federal Reserve officials, essential though it is, will not suffice, because it cannot settle conflicts growing out of irreconcilable Treasury and Federal Reserve objectives.

Grounds For Divorce

A new solution for the Nation's muddled divorce-law setup has been proposed by Jacob T. Zukerman, chief counsel of the National Desertion Bureau. An entirely new approach to the problem is needed, he maintains, since he sees no chance of movements for a Federal divorce law or for a uniform State divorce law ever getting anywhere. He would substitute a human for a legalistic approach. His plan, which he presents in the current Bulletin of the New York County Lawyers Association, involves, first, a dumping of the traditional concept of divorce as punishment for an offending spouse. Instead, he would make divorce the last resort in a marriage controversy. Courts would put all the emphasis on prevention, holding each case over six months while investigations were made through social work, medicine, psychiatry and the church. If no solution were found, the divorce would be granted. The judge would take control of the welfare of the children, holding such control until they reached their majority. Open fights in court over custody would thus be prevented. Divorce mills would go out of business, since under this procedure anyone seeking divorce would have to apply to the court where he lived.

While this plan seems in line with modern scientific emphasis on emotion, personality and human adjustment to society, yet the difficulty of substituting social science for law in divorce courts (even for six months) would probably be as great, at least for years to come, as that of getting a Federal divorce law or uniform State divorce legislation. Many Americans regard legalistic causes for divorce as part of their basic freedoms. Many might object to the extensive prying into personal lives that the proposed investigations would entail. Yet Mr. Zukerman does not expect any rapid change toward such a procedure. He sees hope that "some day" laws along this line will be passed. And if he is right in contending there is no chance of straightening out the jumble of divorce laws by legal means, then an approach by science might well be explored.

Protecting Our Ships

Secretary Acheson's note to the Chinese Nationalist government gives emphasis to the more positive aspect of the policy the State Department is pursuing in regard to China. It is a firm protest against the irrational attack of a Chinese naval vessel on the Sir John Franklin, an American-flag ship, in the approaches of the Yangtze River. The United States holds the Chinese Nationalist government responsible for losses sustained by American nationals as a result of such incidents and asks that attacks on our ships be promptly stopped. In other words, the crumbling Nationalist regime has been put on notice that the United States regards these attacks upon American ships as lawless and does not intend to tolerate them.

So far as it goes this forthright stand is a logical application of our traditional policy. At the same time, however, the State Department is trying to keep American ships away from Communist-held Chinese ports that have been declared closed by the Nationalist regime. This is tantamount, as we pointed out the other day, to giving support to the loose and ineffective Nationalist blockade. Secretary Acheson has reiterated the United States' unwillingness to recognize the closing of Chinese ports and adjacent territorial waters. It follows that American vessels have a right to enter those ports, and that right cannot be surrendered without creating a false impression in the minds of the Chinese and many other peoples. As we see it, the logical corollary to this latest Acheson note is the protection of American ships in going where they have a right to go.

Self-Help Agriculture

Just prior to World War I an unassuming young American went to Bessarabia, then part of Russia, and, after two or three years of quiet propaganda and demonstration, succeeded in causing an increase of from 100 to 300 percent in the Indian corn grown by a group of peasants on their own land. The only modern implements he used were American made hoes and hand cultivators. The man is Dr. Lewis G. Michael, who retired recently from the Department of Agriculture, where he left a distinguished record.

The war put a stop to the demonstration. It was a triumph in the application of pyschology and tact and patience to an unglamorous problem of primary importance; one which is now troubling our professional philanthropists who are calling for a billion dollars in subsidies to finance a new world-wide bureaucracy. One wonders if this successful demonstration is known to our would-be world feeders and, if so, to what extent it has been developed. Why, pray, can we not get down to first principles?

Instead of trying to fill empty stomachs temporarily with United States surpluses, would it not be wiser to send trained men to persuade the hungry peoples to improve their methods of agriculture to their almost immediate benefit? It is not an occasion for mechanization. The application of this self-help technique founded on common sense would not be spectacular, but the resulting benefits would be lasting.

It must be remembered, of course, that suspicion and age-old prejudices and sabotage have to be overcome. To accomplish this would require men expert in methods of primitive agriculture and, even more important, the employment, exclusively, of persons temperamentally capable of gaining the confidence of both the officials and the peasants. This method would not, obviously, dispose of our own subsidized agricultural surpluses, but it would put a brake on further wild spending, such as that from which we suffered under UNRRA.

Why not call Dr. Michael from retirement and profit from his experience and judgment?

Spanish Defense

In your November 30 issue the letter, "Spanish Defense," by the Charge d'Affaires of Spain really takes the cake! De Cajellon has protested Herblock's cartoon of Franco, which is indeed within his rights, but to imply as he did that the popular cartoonist of The Washington Post is using Soviet propaganda is wholly base and unfair. The charge that anyone who opposes Franco is of necessity a Communist is getting rather threadbare; in fact, the slur is so overworked as to warrant its elimination from the stock-in-trade of Franco's apologists.

Isn't it generally known that American newspaper reporters have been in Franco Spain and that invariably they return with unfavorable reports of the present regime. Homer Bigart's articles from the New York Herald Tribune of last February hardly can be classed as pleasant reading for the Caudillo. Both Emmett Hughes and Francis E. McMahon, eminent Catholic laymen, have written books highly derogatory on what they have seen in present-day Spain. It is patent that they cannot be charged with using Soviet propaganda.

As to any desire on the part of the Spanish people to see the Pyrenees become the major line of defense in a third World War, we can be assured they have none. Neither has Franco. The whole idea was cooked up to use on our Congressmen when being wined and dined by unofficial agents of Franco who are seeking funds to bolster his tottering regime!

Unemployment Talk

I marvel at the reasoning and logic displayed by Mr. George W. Williams (letter published November 28) concerning the stand taken by Senator McCarran on the displaced persons question. The gist of his letter is that we are going to have "before long, as every other person with an ounce of common sense knows . . . a permanent unemployed list of from 8 to 10 millions."

He's got a perfect case. Except for one thing. Who says that we are going to have a permanent unemployed list of from 8 to 10 million people. The President? Dr. Nourse? Harold Stassen? Stewart Alsop?

The Communists are the only ones who see a depression with such severe results. I'm not saying that Mr. Williams is a Commie; all I'm saying is that he hasn't produced one whit of evidence to prove or support his statement. Furthermore, I resent the implication that Senator McCarran, former Senator Revercomb, and of course, Mr. Williams are the only people with an ounce of common sense. Surely there must be more.

Republican Bosses

Mr. Gabrielson, the head of the Republican National Committee, is desperately searching for an issue that can win for a party that is on the whole and with a few honorable exceptions more reactionary than the voters. So he came out last week with a speech to the effect that "bossism" is the issue.

If it is, the Democrats are likely to win again. The overwhelmingly Democratic city of Boston cleaned up Boss Curley with the help of a plea by President Truman's Secretary of Labor, Mr. Tobin. The Democrats, themselves, put Mayor Hague of Jersey City out of power in his own town, and a Fair Dealish type of Republican, Governor Driscoll, put the finishing touches on the job of ending his State power this year.

But the most spectacular case of unsavory bossism is the corruption under the Republican-bossed city government of Philadelphia. There the exposure by the Democrats of the facts regarding Republican corruption led to one Republican office holder committing suicide, while three others have been convicted of fraud, and the Democrats won the city election for almost the first time in history.

Russian Crop

Have the Soviets acquired such a reputation for truth-telling that one can take their statistics seriously?

As I recall, the Ninth Commandment was one of the first to go overboard, so, when reading the report of that marvelous Russian food crop, it seemed to me a grain of salt might not be out of order. They may have grown a quarter as much, half as much or even twice as much as the figures show—so are we any wiser?

"Roosevelt And The Russians"

The new book by Edward R. Stettinius, Jr.—Roosevelt and the Russians in the Yalta Conference—and most of the reviews of it divert seriously our attention from the critical character of foreign policy predicaments.

It is not a question of whether "we were sold out" by Roosevelt and Churchill to the Russians. In terms of our future security, the real question we should ask is "did these leaders have on hand the best information which either was or could have been available to them concerning Russia's postwar intentions?"

It is becoming increasingly clear that our Government did not have a correct view of Russia's postwar plans and yet there were people who knew what these plans were.

Recognizing that come the postwar, the United States would have to learn to get along, both politically and economically, with the Soviet Union, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States hired a Russian who was an expert in Soviet Union foreign policy to advise it. Shortly after his services began he brought to my desk the names of about 10 people whom he said "will take over Austria when the Soviet army moves into that country." I said, "What do you mean take over—who are these people—where are they?"

He said, "They are Austrian Communists now living and working in Moscow," and I said, "what are they doing?" He said, "They have jobs translating, writing, research, etc., they are well cultivated. They are tested day by day and when the Soviet army moves into Austria you will see that this Mr. Blank will be in charge of communications and this Mr. Blank will be in charge of transportation . . ." Subsequently it turned out that his forecast was substantially correct.

But more significant, he informed me then and there that there was in Moscow a similar committee for every European continental country, for the Middle East, and Asiatic countries. He then had the list of the names for Korea.

He read Russian and was familiar with what was going on in the Russian press.

I became sufficiently concerned that I took up the matter with the chamber management but since his views were not too closely in accord with high United States policy, it was difficult to know what to do.

I requested him to get in touch with the State Department. I discussed this matter with numerous newspapermen. I could not find a single person in Washington who would lend any significance to this disclosure. It was too contrary to the American party line. I personally took the view that it was not in our postwar interest to have the Soviet Union come into the Pacific war. This view was constantly challenged and even labeled as unpatriotic. I nevertheless persisted in it.

The moral of this story is that it is the business of statesmen to know what the score is, just as a businessman is expected to know the nature of his product, his market, and what his competition is and plan accordingly. And so it is the business of statesmen to look after our national security.

This was not done and so long as we continue to base policy on a distorted view of human nature, a distorted view of nationalism, and figure that we can buy good will by dollars, we are going to be led into deeper and deeper international trouble.

U. S. Reliance On Europe

By Marquis Childs

Two-Way Partnership

LONDON.—Henry Ford 2d visited London not long ago with a proposal to build a large new Ford plant. This led to a controversy which illustrates the striking differences between America and Britain today.

Ford wanted to build a plant near the present Ford factory at Dagenham. But Dagenham is rated by the government as an area of acute shortage in both manpower and housing.

Ford was told that a new payroll of 10,000 or more at Dagenham would produce a jerry-built town that would quickly degenerate into a slum. That is contrary to the planning concept of the Socialist government, which will seek reelection in the new year.

The controls applied by Labor ministers who have extraordinarily broad powers often seem not merely irksome and irritating, but downright self-defeating. A tourist who wants to buy goods with dollars and take them back to America finds himself snarled in red tape that makes it all but impossible.

The Transport Commission operating the nationalized transport system has just announced that the current year will most likely see a loss of 60 million dollars. This means a substantial increase in freight charges, and that in turn threatens a drive to reduce production costs so exports can be sent out to earn dollars.

IT IS NOT surprising that, by a hard-boiled rule of thumb, the position of Britain in the recent past has been judged hopeless. At the outset is the fact that these crowded islands hold from five to ten million more in population than can be sustained without imports for which, under the present circumstances, there is no way of paying.

From this, isolationists, jingoists and plain British haters leap to the conclusion that the only sound course is to cut Britain loose. That, in my opinion, is a threat of major peril not for England alone, but perhaps in even greater degree for the United States.

We in America have got in the habit of warning, on every occasion, what would happen to western Europe if American aid were withdrawn. Europe, we have said so often, would go Communist and end as part of the Russian totalitarian system. This sometimes seems to imply that America would stand aside from such a disaster in immaculate isolation.

The fact is that the United States has almost more to lose than western Europe by splitting off. An economic crisis in America would almost certainly follow. Fear and suspicion, with a resulting curtailment of fundamental liberties, would follow.

In order to counter the economic crisis, emphasis would most likely be placed on increasing armaments. In defensive isolation, America would drift toward war as Russia increased and consolidated her area of total control. The end would be a disaster which the strained fabric of Western civilization could hardly survive.

THE MARSHALL PLAN has bought time to understand these things. It has brought western Europe to a plateau of recovery that few had considered possible two years ago. From that plateau, further obstacles to final recovery and stability are now visible.

Unless a new approach and new attack are soon forthcoming, the threat is that the world will slip back into the morass again. It will not be easy. It will take considerably more patience and understanding than have thus far been shown. The temptation will always be to abandon hopeless old Europe.

A partnership with the Western nations, and particularly with Britain, seems to me an absolute essential for survival of the values we hold in common. For this reason it is profoundly disturbing to observe the prolonged quibble over sharing of atomic know-how and resources. Neanderthal men, moved by primitive suspicion, can sabotage every effort at a practical understanding.

In partnership, Europe has tangible assets of high value, foremost being its geography. But there also are intangible assets that match those of America.

One is the deep-rooted belief in the values of a free society that are real and vital here despite economic controls. And another is its patience, which today, at this halfway point, is a prime requisite to temper America's force and power in the world and insure that it will be used for peace and well-being.

Air Force Legality

Just where does the military fit into the Constitution of the United States?

There appears to be no reference to other than an Army, Navy and militia—with no definition of what constitutes the physical structure and components of each of the above forces.

In the setting up of the separate Air Force, what means have been followed to fit it into the basic law of the land? Would the Air Force be considered a component of the Army or a component of the Navy? It is of prime importance to fit this newly created armed force into the proper category of the Constitution—if only for purposes of appropriation. The Air Force should be consistent with the Constitution even if a constitutional amendment is necessary.

Cheap Money Feud

THE long-smoldering feud between Treasury's John Snyder and the Federal Reserve Board's Marriner Eccles has finally blown the lid off the question of Government debt management.

The issues between the two men are not personal. There is a No Man's Land between the Treasury and the Federal Reserve where responsibilities conflict. One agency is charged with the management of our astronomical debt, the other with control of our money supply.

But as our national debt has grown, so, too, has the difficulty of managing it without recourse to the Federal Reserve. The Treasury wants a stable bond market and low interest rates. The Federal Reserve System has provided both by stabilizing the market for Government securities.

There were good reasons for this policy. Our Federal debt of 256 billion dollars is today more than half the total of all debt public and private. In 1929 Federal debt was only 10 percent of the total.

A decline in Government securities could have panicked the market and led to a wave of liquidations. It would have been a severe blow to the financial institutions which have invested heavily in United States bonds. And it would, of course, have made the Treasury's refunding operations most difficult.

For these reasons the Federal Reserve supported the market by agreeing to buy Government securities at or above their face value. But in the postwar period this policy ran into trouble.

WITH the end of hostilities there were three factors making for business expansion: an acute shortage of goods, large liquid assets waiting to be spent, and a lifting of wartime price controls.

Anxious to tap this rich market, businessmen borrowed heavily from private banks. Banks in turn dumped their low-interest Government securities in favor of the better-paying loans to private borrowers.

In the two years 1947-48, Federal Reserve Banks had to buy enormous quantities of Government securities; their total transactions came to 80 billion dollars.

Monetizing the debt can be highly inflationary — much worse than the old bugbear of "printing press money" because under our fractional reserve banking system, every thousand dollars of bonds sold to the Federal Reserve can provide the basis for five thousand dollars in bank credit.

The Treasury was—and is—mainly interested in the easiest management of the Federal debt. But the Federal Reserve System is charged with responsibility for the total effect of credit policies on the economy.

It did not want to fuel inflation. It was willing if necesesary to maintain interest rates on long-term Government bonds. But it felt that short-term securities should be more flexible. If the interest on these was too low to attract the banks, the interest rate should be raised.

There was a long and rather painful struggle over policy between these two agencies during which Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner Eccles was finally eased out of his job to make way for Thomas F. McCabe. Slowly the board gained its point, and interest rates were lifted on short-term securities.

The banks stopped their dumping of Treasury bills and certificates. The day finally came when Federal Reserve banks no longer had to support the market because even long-term securities had risen above the support price. One major source of inflation had been plugged.

LAST WEEK the uneasy truce between Treasury and the Federal Reserve came to an end with Snyder's announcement of a new issue of short-term securities at a lower rate of interest.

It is clear that this issue does not have the Federal Reserve Board's blessing: the board tried without effect to get the announcement held up. Does this reversal on interest rates mean another round of monetizing the debt? Marriner Eccles thinks it does.

He has written an angry letter to Senator Paul Douglas, who is chairman of the Joint Congressional Subcommittee on Monetary, Credit and Fiscal Policies, in which he accuses the Treasury of an "easy money bias" and of making the Federal Reserve System an "engine of inflation."

Eccles' complaint is being aired in closed committee session. This is no time, however, to sweep the whole issue under the carpet. It is too serious for this treatment, and in any case you can't hide a corpse under a rug.

The problem comes down to this: How can the Government find a market for its low-interest securities without forcing the Federal Reserve to take them, and thus become, in Eccles' words, "an engine of inflation?"

The Federal Reserve has proposed this solution. Banks today hold about 20 percent of their deposits in reserves. Let them hold secondary reserves in the form of short-term Government securities.

This would provide a non-inflationary market for low-interest securities and it would stop dumping. Secondary reserves could be lowered in times of deflation to make funds available for private borrowing.

It is time for the Treasury to consider the wider repercussions of its debt management policies. Otherwise the national debt will become the tail that wags the economy.

There can be no further profit from trying to hush up this feud, for it has its basis in divided responsibility. It would be far wiser to appoint a presidential commission to find a solution. The problem is not confined to the United States. The same battle has been fought in other countries, with the same inconclusive results.

Crack in the Curtain

Self-Exiled Russians Tell of Irksome Red 'Master Plan'

Merle Fainsod, professor of government at Harvard, spent 12 weeks in Germany and Austria talking in Russian with Soviet citizens who have deserted or who refuse to return home. Names are fictitious for obvious reasons of personal safety.

(Third of a Series)

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Bits and pieces of evidence brought from the U.S.S.R. by those who won't go back tell a story of years of struggle against conforming to the Soviet master plan for the behavior of all good Russians.

They certainly do not prove that the Soviet Union is seething with unrest or on the point of a revolutionary upheaval. But they do show a deep schism of discontent. Perhaps they explain the iron grip the Politburo feels is necessary to keep Soviet citizens on the straight and narrow Stalin line.

Here are some of the stories, told by recent deserters from the Soviet zone of Germany and by ex-prisoners of war who have refused to be repatriated to the Soviet Union:

Gregory Alexandrov, the 36-year-old son of a carpenter, had done his best as a loyal Communist to "educate" his "backward" mother. She had doubts because she had lost one son with the Reds and another with the Whites during the Revolution. While in technical school he was studying Marxism-Leninism.

Rebuked for His Views

"The professor was pointing out to the class that the Soviet Union was far advanced on the road to communism," he related. "I dissented and quoted various passages from Marx to prove my point that we had still quite a way to go. The professor complained about me and I was rebuked by the Komsomol (young Communist) secretary. This bothered me for years because I thought I had been right."

Later, while a Communist Party member, Alexandrov was working for a Soviet newspaper. He was sent to the Donbass to write up the construction plan, reportedly greatly over fulfilled. He reported, instead, the truth about the project's far-from-complete state. His reward was a blistering rebuke from his superior who suggested he had not yet attained the kind of eminence which would enable him to revise a central committee directive on the "facts."

Teacher for 25 Years

Mrs. Olga Sacharova was a Soviet school teacher for 25 years. These are her views:

"There is a great difference between a revolutionary ideology which appeals to youth's idealistic and utopian instincts and an official ideology which insists on conformity. Communism today has become such an official ideology. It is dinned at the children day after day. But instead of becoming imbued with it, after a while they become bored with it and turn with relief and enjoyment toward literary, cultural and technical interests where they can find some escape. The Soviet's regime's awareness of this fact is shown by its insistence on isolating its people from contact with the outside world. With exposure to the West, the weakness of Communist indoctrination is quickly revealed."

As proof of her argument, Mrs. Sacharova offered the case of her own daughter; brought up a Young Pioneer and a Komsomolka, ostensibly a loyal and devoted Soviet citizen, she was captured by the Nazis and turned into a slave laborer in Germany. That look at the West was enough. Today she is beginning a new life in Australia.

To Escape Liquidation

Ivan Suslov was born, his papers say, in Kovno, formerly in Lithuania. But the Kovno birth was a concoction of his father, a former large landowner, in order to escape Bolshevik liquidation. Ivan thus has lived his life under the shadow of the lie. He became a language teacher in the army. Then an officers club director, a personal enemy, put on Ivan's record the notation that he had failed to perform "Obschestvennoe rabota"—extra-curricular party activities. Suslov countered by getting another officer, a friend, to certify that his language duties were so great he had no time for anything else.

When war came he was in Kiev. He told his university he was going into the army. He told the army he was evacuating with the university. In fact, he hid until the Germans arrived to give him "freedom" from the Soviet Union.

Michael Shuskin was at a university in 1933-37, years of the Great Purge in Russia. He was not arrested but lived in fear he would be. The effect on students was to produce "a mood of disenchantment with the regime, even among the students who were Komsomols or party members."

Read Forbidden Reports

Said Shuskin:

"There was one circle of party students who met in secret to read the forbidden reports of past Communist Party congresses at which Trotsky, Bukharin and others had presented their views. These students felt dissatisfied with the formal reports on the trials and did not really believe the accusations against the old Bolsheviks or their 'confessions.'"

Klemente Astakhov is a doctor of 27, now studying in an Austrian university. Back in 1940 he was a student at Dnepropetrovsk. A new decree announced the elimination of financial support for all but the outstanding students. There was general grumbling among the students and Astakhov was bold enough to write a humorous tale poking fun at the new decrees. He read it to a small group of fellow students he thought he could trust. Next day he was summoned to the Konsomol office and told to produce his tale. Through a friendship he managed to square things without getting arrested.

Col. Yuri Malakhov, now 50, was a tank expert. While on maneuvers in the 1930's his tank crews each morning were given a 20 minute speech on current political developments, a la Marxism.

"Some of the company commanders got pretty bored with this," he said. "After all we were professional soldiers. One day one of our officers was a bit indiscreet. He remarked after breakfast that he was on his way to his daily workout of cursing the bourgeoisie. I was reprimanded for not instilling a sufficiently serious attitude toward political work among my commanders."

Anton Marenko was born in Gomel 35 years ago. He worked for a time in a paper factory where, at 17, he was the youngest employe. One day he criticized working conditions during a trade union meeting.

"The chairman quickly cut me off but there was a big scandal," he recalls. "The administrators decided I had been put up to the speech by others who were the real ringleaders. As a result two older workers were arrested, but I was let off because of my youth."

George Pahukpin is the 34-year-old son of an engineer who ran into trouble with the secret police in the purge year of 1937. He obtained false documents (something many former Soviet citizens tell of doing) and fled to another city. Once again in 1940 the police got hot on his trail and he moved on to become a teacher in a middle school.

Guffaws Provoked

"Our students could hardly be called devoted to the Soviet life," he said. "They reflected rather the dissatisfactions of their families with collectivization of the farms. Once, while teaching Russian literature, I read a passage from Belinsky written in the 1840's which predicted the happy life-to-be in the 1940's. The class burst out into spontaneous guffaws and then just as quickly stopped as everybody realized this might develop into a major scandal. Only in moments like this did inner feeling break through the protective shell every student must develop to survive in the Soviet Union. But I think such moments are the best index of the way the regime is really regarded."

Liquor had a way of bringing out remarks about Russia, the ex-Soviet citizens report.

Lev Plotkin, a 38-year-old laborer who put in ten years of forced labor digging canals, reported that the collective farmers sought escape in occasional grand drunks or "piankas." The secret police net was set up to report the loose talk that flowed with the liquor.

Bitter About "Foxes"

One Russian military government official, who left the Soviet zone this summer, was bitter about what he called the "foxes" in his office—the girl stenographers who were used not only as spies in the office but as provocateurs at evening drinking parties to bring out any latent anti-Soviet sentiment.

Some reported they found that at home they could open their hearts. Ankady Lebedev said:

"I lived two lives, one at home, another at the village school where I taught. At home with my wife I could relax and we could discuss and share our real convictions. At school I put on an official mask and did everything required of a loyal Soviet citizen—social work, subscription to loans, presence at meetings and so on. When students tried to entangle me in dangerous political discussions I made it a point to say I was only a teacher of mathematics and that such questions ought to be discussed with the history teacher."

Dimitri Rizek is a specialist in Roman law, a subject he figured would be the least political of legal matters. He also defended various unfortunates who were accused of stealing or misappropriating state property, cases in which the defendant usually confessed guilt. His job thus was largely one of pleading extenuating circumstances.

"My real interest was in teaching and research," he said. "But that was a foolish thing to think of for my every word in a seminar opened up a path to prison. So when the Germans arrived in Odessa I felt as if I were participating in a jailbreak."

Pope May Go on TV At Christmas Eve Rite

Rome, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Vatican City sources today said the Christmas Eve ceremony of opening the holy door of St. Peter's to usher in the Holy Year may be recorded on television.

If so, it would be the first important solemn ceremony at which Pope Pius XII was televised.

"It may well be that also the Christmas Eve mass celebrated by the Pope in the Mathilde Chapel will be televised," the Vatican sources added.

Pockets . . . Pockets . . . Pockets . . . Pockets

—and not make-believe ones, either. When sketching this dress we had the merry thought of stuffing the pockets with presents. But we'll leave that to you . . . for this is a real Christmas dress in red or green, honey beige or black rayon ottoman.

LARGEST FINANCIAL INSTITUTION IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

"Please forward me the amount due, after deducting the expenses . . ."

D. G. Farragut
Vice Admiral

On December 4, 1865, Riggs & Company received the foregoing request from the famed naval hero of the Civil War, DAVID G. FARRAGUT, Vice Admiral.

Farragut was the first United States naval officer to be named Vice Admiral and subsequently the first to hold the rank of Admiral—climaxing a long career in the service begun at the age of nine.

Likewise, in its own field, the RIGGS banking institution has risen from modest beginnings to a position of PREEMINENCE among the banking organizations in the District of Columbia.

Today, as in the December following the Civil War, we are "forwarding the amount due" to ever-increasing numbers of customers and correspondents in all parts of the United States and abroad.

Fewer, Larger Issues Urged For 'Washtub'

By S. Oliver Goodman

Consolidation of its financing into one operation every 9 or 10 months is suggested for the Washington Suburban Sanitary District of Maryland.

In a recent article by Dell H. Stevens in Barron's, weekly financial publication, it was pointed out that the suburban commissioners have brought new bonds to market four times in 1948 and four more times this year.

"The commissioners," Stevens writes, "do not appear to have weighed how much the failure to give the new-issue market a rest between offerings is costing the District in dollar proceeds of each loan and in interest cost over the life of the bonds."

Latest issue of the nearby Prince Georges and Montgomery counties (familiarly called "washtub" bonds) was marketed last week. It consisted of seven million dollars of tax-exempt serial bonds, maturing from December 1, 1950, to December 1, 1989. Reoffering by a syndicate headed by Phelps, Fenn & Co. of New York was made to the public at prices to yield from 1 percent to 2.80 percent, depending on maturity.

Local houses included in the offering group were Alex Brown & Sons, Goodwyn & Olds and Ferris & Co.

The Barron's article comments that "contrary to most communities, Washington and its metropolitan area in depression and also in time of war are bound to experience a burgeoning population, a housing shortage and continuing high tax collections as has been the case since 1933. The Washington Suburban Sanitary District may reasonably be considered depression-proof."

WILL MAP FIGHT: The executive committee of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents will meet here Thursday to map a program against "countersignature" deals. A number of States now have laws which permit an agent, merely by countersigning a policy, to collect a large fee although all actual work on the transaction has been done by an agent in another State. The NAMIA calls this practice "unjust and unhealthy."

BANK VICTORY: A long-fought tax case involving Washington banks was finally settled yesterday by the Supreme Court. Without going into complicated background, the high court's negative action means that Washington banks will be taxed by the city at 4 percent of their gross earnings, less interest paid depositors, instead of the present 6 percent rate. Prior to 1945 the 4 percent tax rate on bank earnings had been in effect for 40 years. One local banker pointed but that even a 4 percent tax rate "is twice as high as in Maryland and Virginia and as high a rate as anywhere in the United States."

PHONE OUTLAYS: Directors of Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. authorized another $118,000 expenditure for construction in Washington, bringing the total for this year to $11,800,000. More than $116,000 of the latest authorized outlay will go for expansion of underground cable facilities in the Dupont and Woodley central office areas.

BUILDING: The Commerce Department said construction costs are expected to show "a slight upward tendency" in 1950, but the average for next year will be about the same as for 1949. An article in the department's industry report for November said total new construction in 1950 probably will equal the expected $19,250,000,000 in 1949. The report figured a probable drop of 925 million dollars in 1950 private construction outlays as compared with this year, but said public construction expenditures are expected to increase by an offsetting amount.

NEW OFFICERS: Gen. Donald B. Adams yesterday was elected board chairman of Thompson-Starrett Co., Inc., and J. R. Vin Raalte was elected president. Joseph D. McGoldrick, who is retiring from the chairmanship, will remain a director and was named chairman of the executive committee. Thompson-Starrett, which has an office in Washington, is one of the Nation's leading construction firms. During World War II, General Adams was stationed in Washington with the War Department's general staff. His military career covers more than 30 years in the Corps of Engineers.

BACKLOG GROWS: Fairchild Engine & Airplane Co. now has a backlog of more than 90 million dollars, stockholders were told yesterday in a letter from President Richard S. Boutelle. This was Boutelle's first letter to investors of the Hagerstown firm since complete reorganization of the company's management last summer. Boutelle added that the unfilled orders represent "the best position in this respect since the end of the war."

ODD LOTS: Recovering rapidly after the recent long strike, the Nation's steel mills scheduled operations this week at 91.7 percent of capacity against 87.7 percent last week . . . The American Institute of Chemical Engineers at its forty-second annual meeting yesterday discussed peaceful uses of atomic energy, ways to stop stream pollution and how to get rid of heat in a hurry . . . G. T. Baker, president of National Airlines, predicts that the flow of foreign travel from the United States may shift from Europe to South America within the next decade . . . United Air Lines plans to ask CAB approval of 5-cents-a-mile passenger fares on planes carrying cabin cargo. The proposed fares would average about 17 percent below standard fares . .

Dewar Sees Need for More Stockholders

Hollywood Beach, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—Wider public ownership of common stocks was suggested to the Nation's investment bankers today as a means of promoting the free enterprise system.

Hal H. Dewar of San Antonio, Tex., president of the Investment Bankers Association of America, said in opening the main sessions of the association's annual convention here that the bankers occupy a strategic role "in the current struggle against forces that are antagonistic to our way of life." Investment bankers deal in stocks and bonds.

"It is reasonable to assume that a citizen with a stake in the free enterprise system through the direct ownership of securities is going to be a protagonist for that system. We need more of them to fight the battle," Dewar said.

Dewar added the bankers "have not been as alert as we should have been in sensing the shift in wealth and national income which has taken place in the recent past, and in adapting our machinery to tap this large new class of potential investors."

Reporting that 75 percent of the country's spending units own life insurance and only eight percent own stocks, Dewar said that those not owning stocks "either don't know about them or are afraid of them."

Construction In South Sets 20-Year Record

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—Southern construction last month was the highest for any November in the past 20 years, the Manufacturers Record reported today.

The trade publication said building in the 16 States below the Mason-Dixon line totaled $267,566,000, a rise of 30 per cent above the October total and a 5 per cent increase over the figure for November, 1948.

For the first 11 months of this year, the Record reported, monthly construction contract valuations are running ahead of any comparable period in the past five years.

November's construction brought the 1949 total to $2,759,905,000 this is 10 per cent above last year's total for the first 11 months and about 60 per cent greater than the comparable figure for 1947.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PEOPLE OF VIRGINIA

VIRGINIA ELECTRIC AND POWER COMPANY
RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

V.E.&P.Co.

J. G. HOLTZCLAW
PRESIDENT

TO THE PEOPLE OF VIRGINIA:

This letter deals with something of great importance to both you and to us, not just as business men and farmers, but as Virginians and Americans. We refer to the proposed $14,000,000 power plant and transmission line project of The Old Dominion Electric Cooperative.

The Old Dominion Electric Cooperative proposes to spend these millions of dollars of government money to build a completely unnecessary power station and almost 900 miles of equally unnecessary transmission lines. They justify this expenditure on the ground that it "will add to the well-being and prosperity of the rural people of Virginia and the State as a whole."

Now that's a fine, high sounding statement. Let's take a look at the facts and see if it's true.

Will this proposed program improve the power supply of the cooperatives or make it more reliable? No—it will simply duplicate existing facilities, reduce the number of power sources available to the cooperatives (Old Dominion would have one steam generating station with 34,500 KW capacity, while Vepco, in addition to four high capacity interconnections with other private power systems, has eight steam-electric and seventeen hydro-electric generating stations with a combined capacity of over 600,000 kilowatts), and increase the cost of their power.

Will it help in any way to promote the stated purposes of REA? Definitely not. Back in 1936 Congress created the REA to bring "electric energy to persons in rural areas who are not receiving central station service." The electrification of all rural areas in Virginia is rapidly nearing completion. Eighty-five per cent of the farms of the State are already being served. Before this proposed project can be constructed more than 90% of these farms will be receiving electric service.

Will it reduce the cost of power furnished to the cooperatives? No. On the contrary, it will increase this cost. Vepco has offered to sell these cooperatives all the power they now need, or may need in the future, at costs substantially lower, in our opinion, than can be obtained from the proposed project. Cheaper power for rural customers, therefore, will not result from this project.

Will the spending of this $14,000,000 bring electricity to any more farms? No, it will not. The source from which a cooperative obtains its power supply, provided only that supply is adequate, dependable, and economical, in no way increases or decreases the number of customers who will be served by that cooperative.

Since this project will not improve the reliability of their power supply; since it will actually reduce the sources of power available to these cooperatives; since it will be a wasteful duplication of existing facilities; since it won't bring electricity to any additional farms; since it will increase the cost of electricity to these cooperatives—in view of all these things—how can it possibly "add to the well-being and prosperity of the rural people of Virginia and the State as a whole"?

Well, if you believe in Socialism, then maybe that statement about "well-being" still means something. But remember that this project is a long step toward the socialization of electric power in Virginia. If socialized power is good, then socialized business of all kinds, including farming, is good. As one editor has expressed it:

"The people of the United States have a right to socialize the power industry, or all industry, if they want to. But they ought not to be eased into such a program by the back door, and without realizing what they are doing."

Somehow we don't think that Virginians believe in Socialism. We don't believe that when they think this thing through, they'll like to see public money wantonly wasted. We don't think Virginians want government competing in their own businesses or in anyone else's business. We'd like to hear what you think. Won't you write us?

Sincerely yours,

President.

House Group Drafts Report on Lobbies

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

An up-todate report on the activities of lobbies during the first session of the Eighty-first Congress is being prepared by the Special House Committee to Investigate Lobbying, Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.) said last night.

The report, Buchanan told The Washington Post, will bring up to date and supplement one prepared by the Library of Congress on lobbying in the Eighthtieth Congress.

The preliminary report will be made at the opening in January hearings when representatives of the Justice Department, the Budget Bureau and other agencies will be asked to give views on lobbying.

The Library of Congress report, prepared by W. Brooke Graves of the Legislative Reference Service, described Washington as teeming with pleaders for special interests.

Of lobbyists here, it said:

"There are dozens of them, scores of them, hundreds of them. The statement that has often been made, that there are as many lobbyists as there are Congressmen, is a gross understatement of fact.

"There are actually not twice as many but three times as many lobbyists who registered during 1947 and 1948 as there were members of the Senate and House of Representatives combined."

During the first six months of 1948, the report said, more than $3,500,000 was spent on lobbying activities. The heavier outlays were said to have been made by groups interested in displaced persons legislation and in bills to repeal the tax on oleomargarine, and to provide a Government medical service program.

During that period, the report said, nine groups or organizations had lobby expenditures exceeding $100,000 each, while eight others spent between $50,000 and $100,000 and 20 between $25,000 and $50,000.

"According to their own professed beliefs, as set forth in the statements made on the registration forms," the report continued, "practically none of these corporations are engaged in lobbying work.

"It would appear that all of them sit in their offices or in their hotel rooms and meditate, thinking pure thoughts, but never for a moment descending to anything so common and ordinary as lobbying . . . Part of these protestations are a pose; many of them are obviously exaggerated, if not actual deliberate distortions of the truth."

Cushing Likens Protestant Group to KKK

Boston, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Boston, has denounced a Protestant group as a "refined form of the Ku Klux Klan."

The archbishop named Protestants and Others United for Separation of Church and State yesterday in one of his most vigorous speeches.

"The activities of organizations like Protestants and Others United for Separation of Church and State are, of course, the modern form of the old A.P.A., and the refined form of the Ku Klux Klan," the prelate declared.

'Do Not Speak for All'

(A.P.A. was the initials of the American Protective Association, a late nineteenth century Anti-Catholic organization which now is defunct.)

Archbishop Cushing told the annual convention of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name Societies: "It is most important to remember that these people do not speak for all, or even most of our non-Catholic neighbors."

The archbishop said: "Our people are in a very precarious position, thanks to the extremely hard, though evil, work which contemporary anti-Catholics have done."

Dr. Newton Charges "Abuse"

In Atlanta, Dr. Louie D. Newton, chairman of the executive committee of the Protestant group, said "It's just another instance of resorting to abuse when you have no argument.

"The leaders of our organization are nationally respected churchmen," Dr. Newton said. "They include such men as the head of the Princeton University Divinity School, and the presidents of several colleges and universities.

"My own record on the Ku Klux Klan is generally known. I was one of the first persons who took a stand against the Klan. Why, in 1921 I was sued for $150,000 by the Klan for an article I wrote. They didn't collect."

Dr. Newton is pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist Church of Atlanta, and is a former president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Mother Saves Children From Burning Bedroom

A Redland, Md., housewife rescued her two children yesterday from a blazing bedroom reportedly set afire by her 4-year-old son.

The mother Mrs. Norma Grogan, told Montgomery County police that while in the basement she heard her 3-month-old daughter, Amelia, crying. She rushed upstairs to find the room on fire.

The older child, Karl, had been playing with matches and ignited the curtains, police said.

Harris Trying to Land Cass Michaels of Chisox

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Baltimore, Dec. 5.—Another year, another winter baseball meeting and another batch of aging and unemployed ball players, pining for the security of a contract with semi-monthly pay days. Annually they reappear to try, hopefully, to sell themselves to old pals who have risen to the estate of big league or high minor league managers.

Povich

Taft Wright, the former Nat, former White Sox, former Athletic; Pete Appleton, who pitched for the Indians, Red Sox and Nats; Ben Chapman, former manager of the Phillies; Earl Whitehill, pitching ace with the Tigers and Nats years ago—they're all job hunting here at the meeting of 59 minor yeague bosses.

They call it the meeting of the minor leagues but it is liberally sprinkled with major league pooh-bahs here to protect their minor league interests, dictate policy and maphay swing a deal or two on their own account.

Washington Manager Bucky Harris was button-holed successively by Taft Wright, Pete Appleton, Earl Whitehill and Ben Chapman. Wright wants to catch on with the Nats as an outfielder—the other three have their eyes on the vacant coaching job with the Washington club.

"WHAT HAPPENED to your batting average?" Harris asked Wright rather bluntly. The chunky Wright, never a great outfielder, but always recognized as one of the better natural hitters had his answer ready, and promptly "You can't get any basehits when they keep you on the bench," he said, referring to Connie Mack's failure to play him regularly.

Whitehill is the favorite among the candidates for the Washington coaching jjob. He is Harris' No. 1 choice, and they are old pals from the days when Harris was managing the Phillies and Whitehill was his third base coach. Harris values Whitehill's aggressiveness, particularly on a dead fish Washington club, and has recommended him to Owner Clark Griffith.

Fact is, Whitehill has been offered the job by Griffith, but not at a salary that interests the handsome former pitcher who is doing somewhat well as a super-salesman for the A. G. Spalding & Co. sports goods. "I'd like to come back to baseball, if Mr. Griffith makes it worth while. Maybe we can get together," he says.

The major league team at the meeting most desperately trying to make a trade is the New York Giants, who are annoyed by their status as the also-ran club in a three-team city. The Giants are feeling keenly the dominance of the Yankees and Dodgers, gate receipts are far off, and they are willing to go slightly overboard for a box-office atraction.

ONE OFFICIAL of the Giants points out, "We're in foul shape because we have no star. The Yankees have Di Maggio and Page, and the Dodgers have Jackie Robinson to pull 'em in at the gate. That leaves us a bad last in New York. "The chief hope of the Giants is that they can wangle the colorful Eddie Stanky from the Braves, "even if we have to pay too much money for him."

Bill Veeck isn't here, but he has an appreciation for the problems atending those who operate minor league clubs. "It's a breeze promoting a team in the majors compared to what you have to do in the minors when your funds are limited," Veeck has said. "In the minors, if you make a mistake and make a bad deal, you never recover. In the majors, the money that comes in at the gate covers up a lot of your mistakes."

Lefty O'Doul, manager of the San Francisco Seals, declares emphatically that in Outfielder Irv Noren, the Nats bought "the best player we've seen in the Pacific Coast League in years." O'Doul says "Noren is a strange hitter. You can fool him on one pitch, and if you give him the same kind again he'll knock it out of the park. And the only outfielder in the majors who is better is Dominic Di Maggio."

The St. Louis Cardinals are playing it smartly, with a vote on the repeal of the bonus rule coming up before the minor league sessions later in the week. They are ordering their minor league affiliates to vote against repeal, and circularizing all the other minor league clubs to defeat repeal.

The Cardinals, despite their own vast farm system, don't own a "bonus" player, and are happy about that status. Because the rules forbid a club to send a bonus player to a lower league for seasoning, the Cardinals are happy to leave their rivals burdened with green rookies who should be in the minors.

Jack Onslow Willing to Trade Him

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Dec. 5.—The Nats have enlarged the scope of their trading attempts and are now dickering with the Detroit Tigers and Chicago White Sox, as well as the Yankees, during the annual minor league sessions which major league representatives are attending in force.

Manager Bucky Harris admitted freely that he was talking or had appointments with all three clubs, with a second baseman his chief objective.

"Where's Onslow?" was Harris' first inquiry after checking into the Lord Baltimore Hotel headquarters this afternoon, and he was inquiring about Jack Onslow, manager of the White Sox.

Harris' interest lies on the fact that Second Baseman Cass Michaels has been labeled "available" by the Chicago team. The Nats' bosses have been high on Michaels for a couple of years and Onslow is not reluctant to trade him. The White Sox manager and second baseman were feuding all last season.

On All-Star Team

Michaels was voted the American League all-star second baseman in 1949. The Nats hope to acquire him without giving up a top-flight pitcher like Ray Scarborough, and are talking to Onslow in terms of other Washington pitchers and an outfielder.

If the White Sox are responsive, Harris admits the Nats would lose all interest in George Steinweiss, Yankee surplus second baseman. The Yankees are holding out for such as Scarborough or First Baseman Eddie Robinson, but the Nats reject any deal on that basis.

Harris is somewhat handicapped in his talks with the Yankees, because of a personal feeling against George Weiss, Yankee general manager, who sacked Harris as the New York manager at the end of the 1948 season. "But Casey Stengel and I are good friends, and we will talk," said Harris.

Owner Clark Griffith did not accompany Harris to the meetings today, but in Washington he said, "If Bucky cooks up a deal that needs my final approval, I'll take the first train to Baltimore and try to close it."

Tigers Want Robinson

The Detroit Tigers have made overtures for Eddie Robinson to meet their first base problem and have offered George Vico and Dick Wakefield, but the Nats thus far have not been impressed with that proffer.

Meanwhile, despite the fact that it has merely reached the rumor stage, there are widely circulated reports that the Yankees and Athletics have already closed a deal involving a Philadelphia pitcher, Carl Scheib or Joe Coleman. In return the A's are seeking an infielder.

The Athletics are known to be actively bidding, too, for Third Baseman Bob Dillinger of the Browns, in competition with the Cleveland Indians. Dillinger will go for the highest price, it is reported.

The Browns are also holding before the Tigers the opportunity to buy Second Baseman Gerald Priddy, for whom the Tigers last season offered $200,000.

Hoyas Rout Catholic; GW Wins

Georgetown rolled to an easy 73-46 victory over Catholic last night before a turnaway crowd of 2000 at the Brookland gym. It was the opener for both teams.

John Brown rolled up 19 points to lead the scoring for the Hoyas who were making their first start under Buddy O'Grady. John Mazziotta was next high with 12 points. Jim Losty led the Cardinals with 14 points.

From the moment John Norris dropped a set shot to break a 2-2 tie in the opening moments, the Hilltoppers were never headed.

Georgetown swept its bench clean of subs in an attempt to hold down the score, but it was to no avail.

Colonials Whip Quantico, 75-59

"Little" Gene Witkin, 5-foot-8 play-maker, was the big man for George Washington University basketball forces last night as they opened their 1949-50 season with an impressive 75-59 triumph over the Quantico Marines.

Witkin scored 17 points in the clash at Eastern. He was tied for scoring honors with the Marines' Cy Waldrop, who sank 11 of his 15 foul shots.

Center Larry Adler sank a pair of single-pointers in the first 35 seconds of play and the Colonials were never headed. At halftime they held a 37-29 margin.

A feature of action was the performance of Art Cerra, lanky forward, who was playing his first game after a year of idleness due to illness. He scored 15 points for the winners.

In a preliminary the G. W. U. freshmen rolled mercilessly over Navy Quarters I, 87-36, behind Bob Edenbaum and Tex Silverman, who totaled 45 points between them.

Ike Whips Dawson in Close Fight

By Orlo Robertson

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (AP).—Ike Williams retained his lightweight boxing championship tonight, defeating Freddie Dawson of Chicago in a bout so close that it brought prolonged boos from the crowd of 10,389 in Convention Hall.

Williams weighed 135 pounds, Dawson 134.

The lithe Negro from Trenton, N. J., was the unanimous choice of the two judges and Referee Charlie Daggert but the judges—Frank Knarsborough and Harry Lasky—gave him the decision by only a margin of one round.

While Knarsborough and Lasky saw it eight to seven in the 15-round fight, Daggert gave Williams nine heats and called six for Dawson.

Ike Feared Betting Coup

Williams, making the fifth successful defense of his crown since taking undisputed command of the 135 pounders in 1947, entered the fight the 7½-to-5 favorite.

The odds dropped early tonight and before the fight the champion called newspapermen into his dressing room and said he feared a betting coup. Ike said he had learned from a friend this afternoon that the "fix" was on for him to lose the title.

And for awhile it looked as if he could, fixed or no fix. Dawson refused to be a target for the champion's sharp punches and Ike had to meet the challenger on his own grounds.

Few Hard Punches Thrown

At times the crowd, which paid a gross gate of $45,652.60 (the net was $33,233.40), booed the gladiators as they put their heads together and poked each other in the body.

There were no knockdowns. In fact there were few hard punches. Williams caught Dawson with a power left to the head in the fifth—the first solid blow of the fight.

In the eighth, one of Williams' right crosses cut Dawson on the left cheekbone. The wound was reopened in the fourteenth but it never caused the Chicagoan any trouble.

After 11-Year Lapse

Phil Fox, a Four-Sport Coach, Has Hands Full As Wilson Teachers Get Back Into Athletics

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

AFTER A LAPSE OF 11 years Wilson Teachers College is going back into intercollegiate baseball, track and football competition.

As Wilson's only physical education instructor and basketball coach, Phil Fox, has his work cut out for him. He must coach four sports now.

But he asked for it.

When he moved over from Roosevelt High to succeed the veteran, G. H. (Doc) White last June, he prodded the students at Wilson into asking for an expanded sports program. They got it.

It could mean agreat deal in alleviating the shortage of teachers. With a more attractive sports program, the little 11th and Harvard sts. nw. school should lure more of the area's high school graduates to its gates.

Since Wilson resumed basketball two seasons ago, the male enrollment has zoomed more than 100 percent, to 213. And the spirit of the student body has soared more than that.

When Wilson journeyed 80 miles through the mountains to play a basketball game against Shepherd, W. Va., College, 150 students piled into buses and autos to trail along and root. Total enrollment is 500. Unfortunately, they saw Wilson's two-game winning streak broken, 70-65. Previously, the Owls (that's Wilson's nickname) defeated East Carolina State and Gallaudet.

Besides the man-sized coaching job he faces, Fox also has numerous other problems to conquer.

For one thing, Wilson is a part of the city's public school system, and as such must support its athletic program through admissions at games (same way as the Interhigh schools).

Furthermore, Wilson has no stadium or suitable gym. And, starting from scratch, it has no football, baseball or track uniforms and equipment.

It's a good thing that Fox is well liked. His friends at the sporting goods stores have promised him cut-down prices. He's also working out deals with the Nats and Redskins for some of their discarded equipment.

Fox has already scheduled four football games for next fall, all of them away. He'll travel to Atlantic Christian of Wilson, N. C., Glasborough State, Gallaudet, and Newport News (Va.) Apprentice School. These schools have offered attractive guarantees, and Wilson figures to clear $800. With $1000

Terps Smashed By Vols, 61-40

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 5 (AP).—Tennessee's Volts outclassed the University of Maryland, 61 to 40, here tonight for their third consecutive basketball victory of the season.

The Terrapins were in the game for only a few minutes in the first period. At the end of the first 10 minutes they were tied 11-all, but the Volts pulled away to a 22-17 halftime lead and walked away easily in the second period.

Veteran Guard Hugh Jones led the Vol scoring with 13 points as he spearheaded the fast-break attack.

Channel Swim Contest Proposed, Seals Left Out

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Channel swimming, which became almost as popular this summer as a weekend in the country, will be turned into a contest in 1950.

The Daily Mail, a London morning newspaper, today put up £1000 ($2800) in prize money for the fastest swim.

Five men and a seal made it this year. The 1950 contest will be open to men and women. No mention was made of seals.

Metro Protests Are Thrown Out

Metropolitan Amateur Football League's Board of Commissioners last night disallowed the protests of both the Southwest Merchants and the Riverside Rollers concerning overweight players, League President Bill Strickler announced.

The Merchants won the special playoff game, beating the Rollers 13-7 and taking the Metro League's 160-pound Western Division crown.

Kimbrough Sues Dons

Los Angeles, Dec. 5 (AP).—John Kimbrough, grid fullback fired by the Los Angeles Dons last August 1, today sued the professional football club for full payment of $13,500 as his salary for the 1949 season.

Titone Wins Over Llanos

Charlie Titone, 124¼, Brooklyn, carved out a 10-round split decision over Art Llanos, 123, New York, last night at Turners Arena before 536 fans.

The referee, Harry Volkman, voted for Llanos, but Judges J. E. Trigg and Benny Alperstein gave the nod to Titone.

Titone's eye was cut in the first round, and a solid smash by Llanos rocked Titone in the eighth round, but the Brooklynite weathered the storm. Both boys were trying for the knockout blow in the last two rounds.

Marshall Clayton, Washington, 140, maintained his unbeaten pace, scoring a TKO in 2:28 of the fourth round over Jimmy Briscoe, 145, Washington in a five-rounder.

Pat Thomas, Washington lightweight, 133, stopped Walter Hudson, Philadelphia, 130, in 2:29 of the second round of a five-rounder. Kid Saucer, 176, Washington, and Fred Bailey, 168½, Washington, drew in four rounds.

Johnny Cunningham, 141½, Baltimore, scored a four-round decision over Frank Ball, 140, Washington. Scott Richardson, 161, Washington, stopped Joe Williams, Baltimore, 161½ in 2:28 of the third round.

Ring Show Tonight At Carroll K of C

The Carroll Council Knights of Columbus will hold their fifty-first annual amateur boxing show tonight at the Knights of Columbus Hall at 918 10th st. new.

Twelve bouts, the first getting underway at 8:30, include fighters from all weight divisions from flyweight to heavyweight. Boxers from the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, Merrick, St. Mary's National Training School and Andrews Air Field Air Base will participate.

Dixie Walker Pilots Atlanta

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—Dixie Walker, former Brooklyn Dodger and Pittsburgh Pirate outfielder, was named today to manage the Atlanta Crackers in the Southern Association. He succeeds Cliff Dapper.

The former big leaguer was released last year by the Pirates, whom he joined after a long siege in Brooklyn.

Redskins Ask Waivers On Cochran and Katrishen

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

The irrepressible Washington Redskins, who claim they'll end their 1949 season Sunday as "the first Eastern team to win or lose a Western championship," yesterday cut their squad to 29 players by asking waivers on a second-year guard and a rookie fullback.

Mike Katrishen, burly lineman from Mississippi Southern, joined Auburn's Leon Cochran on the waiver list for two widely separate reasons.

After an excellent rookie season in '48, Katrishen was charged with an extremely spotty performance this year. Fullback Cochran, one of the scrappiest youngsters on the freshman-infested Redskins, was waived for his inability to learn the signals in 11 games. He was the Tribe's fourth-string fullback behind Pete Stout, now recovering from a broken shoulder in Texas, Ed Quirk and John Hollar.

Still enthused over a fine showing in Sunday's 30-0 beating of the Green Bay Packers, the Redskins seemed to be at a belated peak for next Sunday's all-important—to the Rams—finale at Los Angeles.

The Redskins, themselves mired in fourth place in Eastern National Football League standings, will win the Western championship—for the Rams, of course—by losing to or getting themselves tied by their California cousins.

The Redskins can deprive Coach Clark Shaughnessy's lads of the title with two "ifs": (1) If they repeat an August exhibition triumph over the Rams and (2) if the Chicago Bears defeat the Chicago Cardinals in their intra-city final. In the event both conditions are fulfilled, the Bears get the Western crown and entertain the Philadelphia Eagles for the N. F. L. mantle.

BRIEFLY—Head Coach Herman Ball, the Redskins' "shake it up" artist, appears likely to hold his job longer than any of his last five predecessors after

Third in Series, 'Tennis Is My Racquet'

'Bad Boy' Riggs Kept Off Davis Team

Former World's Tennis Champion

NOBODY gave me a chance in the national clay courts tournament at Chicago in 1936. I was a real dark horse. Frankie Parker, with Princeton's Mercer Beasley watching him like a hawk, was top seeded.

But I went through him in straight sets to hang up the most impressive victory of my career so far and win the title.

Bobby Riggs

All of a sudden I was popular. Tournament invitations followed me around. All the big clubs wanted to get the new national clay courts champion into their lists.

Lucrative expense accounts were dangled invitingly before my eyes. Don't get the idea that I let them dangle long, either. For an 18-year-old kid, I wasn't doing badly.

WAYNE SABIN and I headed East. At the Nassau Country Club, Glen Cove, Long Island, I played on the first grass courts I'd ever seen in my life. Out in California, all the tennis courts are cement.

At Nassau, I met Gregory Mangin in the final, and beat him.

During the course of the tournament, I met all the important Eastern tennis writers.

They all seemed to be curious about me, having read about my difficulties with the Southern California Tennis Association and about my upset win over Parker at Chicago.

To them I was fresh copy. Unfortunately, some of the writers decided the best way to slant their copy was to make me out a fresh kid. They called me "The Bad Boy of Tennis."

SABIN and I traveled with Jack Del Valle, a man who had a car and a love for touring the tennis circuit . . . He was always looking for a chance to lay a bet on us.

Rumors were tossed around that Del Valle was a big gambler, and that Wayne and I were throwing matches every now and then in order to let him make betting coups.

That kind of talk never does any athlete any good. I wish I could have caught someone spreading a story like that. Although his personality seemed to rub the officials the

DEAR FOLKS:

Noble Impulse, third in the Preakness and purchased by Justine Funkhouser for $18,000 has had ailing legs fired and will not be seen in action until next summer, Trainer Frank Gall said today. Never has this track had more or better horses than at this meeting. For instance, 383 entries were made this morning trying to get on the 64 horse Tuesday program. Miss Gossip was injured while being loaded in a van at Bowie which accounts for her being scratched out of the opening feature race. H. C. Allnutt has refused several offers for Smarty Arty, a 2-year-old purchased for $500 at an auction this fall. Trainer Bernie Bond is reported chasing a train headed for Florida with the wrong horse aboard. The mistake was made in loading at Bowie. If Bond doesn't connect it looks as if the lucky horse is going to get an unexpected Florida vacation. BILL.

Slammuring Pays $16.80 In Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5.—Willie Downs came back to the scene of his first saddle successes today and turned in three winners as this sporty, six-furlong track began the last stand of the East's 1949 turf season.

The Baltimore youth, performing before a crowd of 5000, rode winner No. 3 in the featured Inaugural Purse aboard Slammuring owned by Mrs. Frank D. Christmas of Washington.

Octorora Is Second

Bringing the daughter of Grand Slam and Murmuring to the wire with a clever performance, Downs got home a length and three parts ahead of H. M. Simpson's Octorora, Washington-owned and the favorite in the field of eight. Third money went to W. C. Ensor's Olecranon.

Slammuring accounted for his only previous victory in his fifteenth start of the year at Bowie and few believed she would have sufficient punch today. Those who did string along with the filly received a $16.80 win mutuel. The 4-year-old was clocked in 1:26 for the six and a half furlongs.

Evening News Scores

Downs opened the meeting on a victory down beat, bringing A. W. Berry's Evening News along in the last jump to take a nose decision from S. J. Carral's Light Buckle. Evening News paid $14.40 and set the stage for a $99 daily double. C. F. Bradford's Twenty Nine taking the second event under the handling of Ray Arduini of Washington. The 5-year-old paid $8.40 individually.

Downs accounted for his second winner aboard Jay Mohr's Puritan, bringing the Jamestown gelding along to score with daylight to spare at an $8 mutuel.

Howard Quint Meets Bolling Field Tonight

Howard seeks to continue its domination of the Bolling Field Flyers when they meet at Howard at 8:15 tonight. Howard won last week's game, 59 to 50, at Bolling Field. The Bisons have won four games so far this season while losing none.

Wilson Gets Back Into Sports Swing

more, Fox figures that the year's program can break even financially.

The invigorated athletic program at Wilson is giving a big chance to the smaller Washington high school athletes who don't quite have enough size to make the grade in the larger colleges.

Wilson has an all-Washington basketball team, sparked by All-High stars Kenny Burns and Al Giuffreda of Eastern, Billy Hibbs and Bob Zamsky of Roosevelt and Jack Spicer of Gonzaga.

All stand under 6 feet tall, but they are shrewd ball hawks and exceptional set-shot artists. Against Gallaudet, Wilson sank 13 out of 16 set shots. Spicer, himself, sank 10 out of 14.

Fox already has the basis for a solid football team. Some of his prospects are Backs Gene Garner and Jerry Rothkin and Guard Irv Shear from Roosevelt, End Wally Newman from Anacostia and Guard Eddie Thompson from Woodward.

Also, there are Tackles Herman Rubinstein and Bob Brunett From Montgomery Junior College, Tackle Joe Corrado from Uniontown (Pa.) High, and Tackle Charlie Offut of the Car Credit sandlot championship team of Washington.

Some of those linemen are pretty big too. Rubinstein scales 220 while Burnett, Offut and Corrado are only 10 pounds lighter.

Word of the Wilson expansion has already spread to the high schools. Two of Eastern High's leading pitchers are planning to come to Wilson in February. And three members of Anacostia's strong line will move in then too.

So it looks like Fox, a guy who loves his work, will have his hands full.

Globetrotters Play Sphas Here Tonight

The Indiana Clark Twins meet Dutch Denhert's reorganized New York Celtics in the first game of a four-team professional basketball doubleheader tonight at Uline Arena.

The Harlem Globetrotters and the Philadelphia Sphas tangle in the feature game at 9:30 following a vaudeville show between games.

The Sphas feature Mike Bloom, 6-6, former Temple University All-American and Chicago Stag ace, and Stan Brown, former Philadelphia Warrior ace.

The Globetrotters will start their Big Five, of "Goose" Tatum, "Sweetwater" Clifton, Marques Haynes, "Babe" Pressley and Ermer Robinson.

Good Pitch, Field

wrong way, Jack was good to us—and a strictly honest guy.

Playing doubles together at the Nassau Club, Sabin and I went to the semifinals before we were eliminated by the expert Davis Cup team of Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn.

At the Westchester-Biltmore at Rye, N. Y., I played in the Eastern grass court championships. Back in form, I went all the way to the finals and played Don Budge. He brushed me off, but not until I had taken a set from him.

I went on to win my first big grass-court tournament at the Newport Casino, where I beat Parker in the finals.

It was Christmas before I reached home. I wasn't home long before my great and good friend, Perry Jones, secretary of the California Tennis Association, sent for me.

CHOOSING his words carefully, Mr. Jones told me, "Maybe we underestimated you, Bobby. Anyway, I wish you'd stick around home for a while and play in our tournaments. Give us a hand and we'll see what we can do to help you."

As a clincher, he reminded me, "It would be just as well for you to get back in the good graces of the association. After all, the Davis Cup team will be chosen in the spring."

As if I didn't know it. There wasn't anything I wanted more than to play on the cup team.

So I listened politely and said, "Okay. I'll stay here and do my best to be helpful." For a while, at least, the hatchet was buried.

Invitations came from the Sugar Bowl Carnival and the Southern winter circuit. I turned them down. Whatever Jones asked me to do, I did. I was really doing penance.

"Here's something that will make you feel a little better, Bobby," he announced. "I've got instructions from New York for you to get ready to join the Davis Cup squad in San Francisco!"

Did I jump! That was what I'd been waiting for, working for, sweating for, all these weeks.

It wasn't long until the ax fell. Mr. Jones sent for me.

"Bobby, I've got some bad news for you," he said solemnly. "I just got word from the committee that you've been dropped from the Davis Cup squad. A letter of explanation is supposed to be on its way from New York."

When the letter from the Davis Cup committee arrived, I discovered they were dropping me because of rumors that I had broken training during tournaments at Atlanta and Houston.

In other words, they were accusing me of 'raising hell" on that trip.

The funny part of it (well, it wasn't very funny to me) was that I was constantly with Joe Hunt on that jaunt. We roomed together and spent all our spare time together. And they didn't stop him.

Wolf Quits, Sanders May Get Florida Job

Ganesville, Fla., Dec. 5 (AP).—Ray (Bear) Wolf quit as Florida football coach and athletic director tonight.

Henry (Red) Sanders of the University of California at Los Angeles is expected to succeed Wolf. Sanders said yesterday Florida has offered him the job, but announcement was delayed while he conferred with UCLA officials.

Wolf coached at Florida four seasons—none of them a winner. His contract had another year to run. It was renewed through the 1950 season last year when alumni, students and sports writers rallied to his support.

In his four years as coach, Florida won 13, lost 24 and tied two games. Against Southeastern Conference foes in that time Florida won 2, lost 17 and tied 2.

It has been reported that Sanders has been offered a five-year contract at $15,000 annually plus a $5000 annual expense account and a home, the Age-Herald said.

The former Vanderbilt coach, who has just completed his first season as coach of the University of California at Los Angeles, has two years to go on a three-year contract.

Palace Veterans To Help Divvers

All former members of the 150-pound and unlimited football teams of the Palace Laundry era of 1922-34 are requested to meet at the Barney Neighborhood House gym Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

The purpose of the meeting is to discuss what steps will be taken toward helping out the needy family of Harry Divvers, former Palace Laundry player who is in Gallinger Hospital.

Leahy Calls Williams as Good as Lujack

Houston, Tex., Dec. 5 (AP).—Frank Leahy says Bob Williams is as good a quarterback as the fabulous Johnny Lujack.

The Notre Dame coach made the statement today in discussing next year's prospects for his national champions.

He said that while Williams would be his only returning regular next season he was confident Bob would be able to handle the job, even if his help is not up to par.

"Offensively and mechanically," Leahy told reporters, "Williams is as good right now as Johnny Lujack."

"He had to fight to get into school. We knew nothing about him. But he certainly came through for us. He's a sweet quarterback."

Virginia Asks Help To Stay in NCAA

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The University of Virginia is asking its fellow schools for help and guidance.

Faced with possible expulsion by the National Collegiate Athletic Association for failing to comply with rules regarding help to athletes, the Cavaliers admit they're stumped for a solution.

"We gladly welcome any and all suggestions," said Norton Pritchett, the school's athletic director last night from Charlottesville. "Our president (Colgate Darden) and board of visitors have been wrestling with the problem ever since we admitted we are in violation of the purity code."

President Darden wrote NCAA officials several months ago that Virginia could not comply with the so-called sanity code. He explained there were very few campus jobs available at Virginia, that athletes are given scholarships which include room and board, which the NCAA forbids. The NCAA limits scholarships to tuition, books and fees.

No Phony Jobs

"There are few campus jobs available at Virginia," Pritchett explained. "And we will not create ficticious jobs.

"Many of our athletes work at various jobs after their seasons are over, but those jobs do not compensate for the cost of room and board and we don't say that they do.

"Virginia did not admit its guilt with the idea of launching a whistle-blowing episode involving other schools. We simply put our cards on the table. Since then, other schools have admitted they have violated the sanity code also. We made our admission because we wanted to be honest about it.

"We are not asking for concessions. We do feel, however, that since there rae few campus jobs available at Virginia that the code, perhaps, could be revised to allow for schools which have situations similar to ours.

Virginia Stays

"We have no desire to imply that other schools are guilty of violating the code also. We merely want to set our own house in order. It's difficult, most difficult, and we're asking for suggestions."

Asked if he though Virginia would be expelled by the NCAA when the group holds its annual meeting next month, Pritchett declared:

"I hardly think so. When the other schools examine their hearts, I don't believe Virginia will be expelled. But expelling us or permitting Virginia to remain in the NCAA doesn't necesarily solve the problem."

HAIR GETTING THIN? then GROOM IT WITH KREML
TO AVOID "SCALP SCUM" AND MAKE HAIR LOOK NEAT

There's nothing better than Kreml to neatly groom thinning hair or sparse locks. Kreml doesn't look the least bit greasy, sticky or gooey. No scummy, dirt-catching film shows through on the scalp. Kreml always keeps hair and scalp looking and feeling so clean. AND SO VERY IMPORTANT—Kreml removes dandruff flakes (more noticeable with sparse hair); it lubricates a dry scalp, giving it a delightful tingle. Change to Kreml today.

Farm and GI Benefits Will Cost Billion More In 1951 Than Expected

BUDGET NOTES: Farm and GI benefits will cost a billion dollars more during the 1951 fiscal year than was originally estimated. The huge increase was added to the tentative 1951 budget during the past several days.

Most of the big dollar cut anticipated for the Veterans Administration has been restored during budget review hearings . . . Internal Revenue Bureau is one of the few agencies that's slated to get additional funds in the President's budget to increase its personnel. Revenue could add several thousand employes if Congress approves the President's request.

The Civil Service Commission will get money in the budget to expand its job classification division . . . The Atomic Energy Commission will get a big increase in funds to expand its operations. So will the Census Bureau that will be in the thick of the 1950 general census . . . The Economic Cooperation Administration will get a reduced budget.

Walter S. Surrey is a good bet to be apointed Assistant Solicitor General to succeed George Washington. He's a top-notch State Department attorney . . . Bob Mullin is the new information director at ECA . . . Robert S. Brumagin has been appointed special assistant to Walter Frese, chief of GAO's accounting systems division . . . Luther C. Steward and Gertrude M. McNally, president and secretary treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes, will be honored at a meeting in the Willard tonight of their union members.

LONGEVITY: It will be another two weeks before the Civil Service Commission will issue its rules on the new longevity promotions for classified workers. Meantime, many agencies are delaying the above-the-maximum-grade raises until the regulations are made public. The raises, however, will be retroactive to October 30, the day the pay Reclassification Act went into effect.

FHA: Federal Housing Administration will be one of the first major agencies to be brought in under the new Classification Act. The agency has been following the act to fix the salaries for most of its 5000 jobs.

To date, only nine jobs have been brought in under the new law. They were in the General Accounting Office. More than 25,000 will be covered by it before next May 1.

LAY-OFFS: More than 50 War Assets and other General Services employes who have been laid off have appealed to the Civil Service Commission.

GSA employes who have been bumped from their jobs by WAA people are threatening to take an appeal to the courts in an attempt to save their jobs unless the commission rules in their favor. WAA is being liquidated and the laid off employes in Federal Supply, Public Buildings, and other GSA agencies say WAA people have no legal right to their jobs.

GSA officials explain that the law that set up the agency clearly gives WAA employes bumping rights throughout GSA. Civil Service agrees.

Paul M. Green has resigned as controller and director of finance for the Atomic Energy Commission. He has been appointed head of the division of management in the college of commerce and business administration at the University of Illinois. The university, however, has given him leave to service temporarily as controller of ECA, where he will succeed Eric Kohler. Lindsley H. Noble will move up to acting controller at Atomic Energy.

JOBS: Civil Service announced yesterday that it would give a special exam early next year to recruit more than 220 persons for temporary census jobs here. Among those needed are 1550 GS-3 clerks and GS-2 and 3 tabulating machine operators.

It's planned to give the test in February and to begin making appointments in March. Most of the details for the exam will be handled by the Census Board of Civil Service Examiners at nearby Suitland, Md. Civil Service will supervise its work.

The census jobs will be temporary, but persons who pass the special exam will have their names entered on lists for permanent appointments. Civil Service also revealed that it will handle temporary census appointments of the clerical jobs that are slated to be transferred to Philadelphia.

Foreign Costumes, Food, Mark Americanization School Fete

Rosa Maria de Oliveira, 14, Chastleton Hotel—Brazil

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

Aura Arias, 15, of 2409 California st. nw.—Venezuela

The John Quincy Adams School at 19th and California sts. nw. was a kaleidoscope of foreign costumes yesterday as the Americanization School Association held its twenty-third annual bazaar.

Young blondes from Norway rubbed corduroy-covered elbows with black-eyed senoritas from Latin America covered with mantillas of black lace. Two gaily-decked lads from Czechoslovakia contrasted with a sturdy Hollander in baggy trousers, tunic and wooden shoes.

They were some of the 1500 foreign-born students from 75 nations enrolled in the school's day and evening classes for instruction in English, citizenship and homemaking.

A highlight of the bazaar, proceeds of which go to welfare work of the school, was the display and sale of dolls dressed in authentic costumes of many lands.

Also on sale were rugs and mats, woven on the school's looms, as well as leather articles and other handiwork.

More foreign flavor was supplied by a dinner served in the school cafeteria from 5.30 to 8 p. m., prior to the closing of the bazaar at 9 p. m.

There were such dishes as French meat pastries; Hungarian goulash; English Yorkshire pudding; Mexican chili con carne; Greek curapeides and almajabanas.

For those who preferred American food, there were ham, turkey and lamb—but even these had a certain flavor of other countries represented by the student cooks.

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, and other school and Board of Education officials were dinner guests of James T. Gallahorn, jr., principal of the Americanization School.

Programs of songs and dances were presented by students in native costume, in the afternoon and evening.

Besides the student handicrafts, articles were sold by the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Patriotic Women of America. Other groups assisting at the bazaar were the Civitan Club and the B'nai B'rith.

Murder Case Tactics Are Questioned

Admissibility of a statement given to police by Clarence W. Robertson was questioned yesterday at the District Court trial of Robertson for second-degree murder in the slaying of his wife last March 20.

With the jury excused, defense counsel argued that Robertson was subjected to police grilling for about four hours before he signed the statement.

The defense also contended that the man was not given a hearing "without undue delay" as prescribed by law.

Robertson, a 34-year-old truck driver, was arrested shortly after 1 a. m. March 20. He signed the statement at 5:17 a. m. and was brought before the District coroner, legally a magistrate, the following day at about 11 a. m. after first being taken to Police Court by error.

Mrs. Charles Rayburn, 1253 13th st. nw., sister of the slain woman, testified earlier yesterday that at one time Robertson showed her a knife, and she quoted him as saying that he "could slash his wife's face and watch her bleed."

Robertson is accused of slaying his estranged wife and wounding a Marine friend of the woman's with a pistol in Mrs. Robertson's apartment, 1125 11th st. nw.

Arguments on the police statement will continue today when the trial resumes at 10 a. m. before Federal Judge James R. Kirkland.

Dumfries, Va.

Postmaster Is Indicted For Forgery

French S. Brawner, 60, postmaster at Dumfries, Va., was indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury in Alexandria on a forgery and uttering charge.

He was one of 19 persons indicted as the December term of Federal court got under way.

The true bill charges Brawner, who was not present, with forging the name of the payee to a Government check and then depositing it in his surplus funds account. The check was for $53.80.

According to postoffice inspectors, the check was a 1947 tax refund sent to Mrs. Albine Linkus, formerly of Dumfries.

A bench warrant was issued for his arrest.

In another case, Lee T. White, 22, of the 800 block of Tennessee ave., Alexandria, was placed on probation for three years after testifying destitution caused him to forge and utter a check for $78.40. White, who said his father is chief engineer of the Federal Communications Commission, is now making about $100 a week as a collector for the General Home Equipment Co., Alexandria.

He said he was employed there in April, 194, when he forged the payee's name to a check he collected. His wife's illness, he said, along with furniture, car, and house payments, caused him to do it.

Body Found on Shore

PUC Asked To Dismiss Streetcar Radio Case

CTC and Broadcast Firm File Brief Denying Freedom Of Speech Issue

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

Attorneys for Capital Transit Co. and Washington Transit Radio, Inc., yesterday asked the District Public Utilities Commission to dismiss the transit radio case.

Their request was made in a brief filed in reply to a brief by Attorneys Franklin S. Pollak and Guy Martin who had asked the PUC to end broadcasts in Washington streetcars and buses.

The PUC proceeding arose from an order by the commission for an investigation to determine whether the transit radio installations were consistent with public convenience, comfort and safety. The PUC decision may be made this month.

Deny Constitution Issue

Capital Transit Co. obtains the radio broadcasts under a contract with Washington Transit Radio, Inc. Their combined brief was filed by Attorneys F. G. Awalt and Daryal A. Myse, representing Capital Transit, and Thomas N. Dowd, representing Washington Transit Radio.

Their brief struck at the argument of the Pollak-Martin brief that the radio broadcasts deprive some listeners of property and freedom of speech in violation of the first and fifth amendments of the Constitution.

The company's brief said the constitutional issue is outside the scope both of the current case and of the PUC's statutory powers.

It added that the Pollak-Martin brief had advanced the "absurd and paradoxical principle" that freedom of speech as guaranteed by the first amendment does not really mean what it says; that it does not mean freedom to speak and listen but rather guarantees a right not to listen—a right that any individual or minor may exercise to prevent all others from speaking or listening." "Under their advocacy the first amendment is not designed to foster the free interchange of expression in the market place of ideas and art, but rather is an instrument designed to promote a society of mutes with each individual completely free to silently and exclusively commune with his own ideas and thoughts."

"Society of Introverts"

The companies' brief said the obvious objective of the Pollak Martin argument was "a society of ascetics and introverts—but the founding fathers gave them no hope for such a society in the United States.

The companies' brief added: "If any rights in property or liberty are involved in this proceeding, it is the right of Capital Transit and Transit Radio to utilize their property subject only to the regulation by the (PUC) commission . . . The action by the interveners (Pollak and Martin) would deprive Capital Transit and Transit Radio of their liberty to contract and their property without due process of law and without just compensation in violation of the fifth amendment of the Constitution.

The brief listed the following as the main points in the position of the Transit and Radio companies:

1. That no substantial evidence has been presented to show that the transit radio broadcasts are inconsistent with public convenience, comfort and safety.

2. That the overwhelming weight of evidence shows first that there is no lack of safety in having the broadcast, and second that the large majority of the transit riding public accept, enjoy, and benefit from the programs.

3. That the constitutional objections of the opposition are "without merit and irrelevant to any issues in this proceeding arising out of the statutory powers of the Commission.

4. That this proceeding should be dismissed for want of evidence to sustain any lawful action by the commission.

Officer Recalls Rookie Lessons, Delivers Baby

When he "just remembered what they told me in rookie school," Police Pvt. Clifton I. Panciera, 32, acted successfully as an impromptu midwife yesterday.

While flagging traffic at Sherman ave., and Barry pl. nw., at 8:15 a. m., yesterday, he was approached by a woman who said her 15-year-old daughter was about to give birth. Private Panciera tried to flag a cab. All were full. So he gave a boy a dime to telephone for an ambulance and went to the home nearby. The baby was about to arrive, and minutes later, did.

The infant, a 3-pound, 3-ounce boy, was placed in an incubator at Gallinger Hospital. The mother was reported in good condition.

$15 Fire Routs 500

A $15 fire in a first-floor janitor's closet in the Securities and Exchange Commission Building at 425 2d st. nw., drove 500 employes to the street shortly before noon yesterday.

Jailer, 67, Balks Wagstaff's Second Break for Freedom

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

Jailer Moxley flexes muscle he used on Wagstaff

A new jail-break attempt by Joseph A. Wagstaff, Chevy Chase "bad boy," and two companions in the Montgomery County jail was blocked yesterday after a struggle with a 67-year-old jailer and a prison trusty.

Norman Shirley

However, reports reaching officers that Wagstaff intended to make a third try to break out before he is sentenced at 9:30 a. m. today brought a special armed guard to the jail atRockville.

The jailer is Joseph Moxley, who has served in the jail more than 20 years. He suffered bruises in his struggle, but was not seriously injured. Also bruised in the fight was Norman Shirley, 39, of Rockville, the trusty. He is serving a term on a drunk charge.

Moxley said he went into a cell block containing five prisoners, to make way for Shirley to remove rubbish.

Two of the prisoners attacked him suddenly, he said. They were Harold Smith, 24, of Gaithersburg, Md., and Loyal Wood, 19, of Ardmore, Okla. In the struggle, he said, one of them obtained his keys and unlocked a nearby cell where Wagstaff was confined. The Chevy Chase youth then jumped into the fray.

Moxley said he was able to knock out Smith, but was knocked down once himself. He said Wagstaff tried to keep him from calling out by holding his hand over the jailer's mouth, but the elderly man managed to call Shirley. The trusty was embroiled in the fight and knocked down, but managed to reach a fire-alarm signal and pull it. This set off a siren outside the jail and brought county police and other deputy sheriffs on the run.

At the sound of the siren, Moxley said, the three prisoners stopped fighting.

Moxley later swore out assault warrants against the three men. Wagstaff has been convicted of assaulting a servant in his family's home at 5506 Grove st., Chevy Chase, Md., with a paring knife. He is to be sentenced on that charge today.

Smith is held on charges of forgery, assault with a deadly weapon, concealing weapons and disorderly conduct. Wood is a dishonorably discharged Air Force veteran charged with bigamy.

Wagstaff's first jail-break attempt came last week when two youths tried to pass him a milk container in which were a bottle of whisky and a half-dozen hacksaw blades.

The youths were arrested. They are Alfred S. DeAgro, jr., 18, of 8105 University lane, Silver Spring, and Leonard W. Lewis, 21, of 4623 Asbury pl. nw. Lewis is free on $100 bond on a conspiracy charge. DeAgro was in another section of the jail when yesterday's escape attempt came, Moxley said.

Wagstaff has a five-year police record on a variety of charges. He served a year in Nevada on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon after he allegedly shot another Washington youth six times, at Las Vegas. He also has faced charges of speeding, larceny, malicious destruction of property, and another assault charge.

Moxley described him as the worst-behaved prisoner in his experience in the Rockville jail. He said he is certain Wagstaff hatched the plan for the break attempt yesterday. Moxley said it would have failed in any event, because when he enters cell blocks, he never carries the keys for the outside jail doors.

Told of rumors of another break attempt, Chief Charles M. Orme of Montgomery County Police ordered the special guard at the jail as long as Wagstaff is in it.

Msgr. Sheen Will Address Chest Session

The Rt. Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University and a nationally known speaker, will address this week's general report luncheon of the Community Chest Federation campaign Thursday.

Monsignor Sheen's appearance, his first in two years at a Chest campaign meeting, will help to spearhead a final effort to raise the less-than-$700,000 needed to reach the minimum goal of $3,991,719.

The Thursday meeting will be preceded by a report luncheon of the Business I and Business II units at 12:20 p. m. today at the Washington Hotel.

Campaign Chairman Frank J. Luchs will preside at today's and Thursday's meetings. The Rev. Dr. A. B. Kelly, pastor of Georgetown Presbyterian Church, will give the invocation today, and the United States Army Band Ensemble will play.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, head of the Government unit, and Chairman Luchs have issued a special bulletin to the approximately 1700 division chairmen of the unit in an effort to add 17,000 new contributors to the 203,435 Government employes who have subscribed.

The Government unit, which stands at the top in the campaign with 91.87 percent of its quota reached, has turned in pledges of $1,456,500, and needs $128,911 to complete its quota.

Nearly 2000 invitations have been issued to the general report luncheon on Thursday, which will be at 12:30 p. m. at the Washington Hotel.

A round-table discussion on why organized labor supports the campaign will be broadcast at 7:30 p. m. tonight over WRC.

Participants will include Clem F. Preller, president, Washington Central Labor Union (AFL); J. C. Turner, vice president, Operating Engineers Union Local 77 (AFL); Morton Liftin, treasurer, D. C. Industrial Union Council (CIO); W. D. Johnson, vice president and legislative representative, Order of Railway Conductors; Frank J. Reagan, president, Columbia Lodge No. 174, Association of Machinists, and Miss Sylvia Altman, Chest Federation.

In Fight on Ban

Airport Cab Test Arrest Is Up Today

The recent crackdown against cabbies picking up fares at National Airport is due for a test today before United States Commissioner Stanley King in Alexandria.

James D. Jewell, 41, a Washington cabbie for 19 years, of 726 N. Abingdon st., Arlington, faces a charge of violating airport regulations prohibiting picking up of fares by unlicensed cabs.

Jewell said an airport policeman, Pvt. Wilmer Payne, warned him he'd be charged if he picked up two soldiers who were climbing into his cab on airport grounds Saturday. Jewell said he invited a ticket despite the warning and told the soldiers to get in.

"I wanted to make it a test case," said Jewell, father of five children and a Blue Light driver. "The Blue Light coffee crowd had agreed that whichever one of us got ticketed, we'd all chip in to take it to court."

Jewell posted $25 collateral.

Airport Administrator Bennett H. Griffin had announced the airport would enforce the clause of its contract with Airport Transport, Inc., giving that firm exclusive pickup rights, on November 7, after two years of "leniency," which he said had resulted in abuses by cabbies.

Griffin said yesterday:

"The contract was open for bids by anyone," he said, "These cabbies who are complaining now could have bid if they had wanted to. Now they're trying to get around the contract we made with Airport Transport, Inc."

Christmas Seal Sale To Open Wednesday

Two thousand volunteers from 90 women's organizations will start sale of Christmas Seals Wednesday. D. C. Tuberculosis Association officials said 85 booths will be opened in stores, theaters, banks, hotels and other public buildings.

Booths will be staffed from now until Christmas, the association announced. In addition, self-sellers for seals will be placed in drug stores, beauty shops and Government building cafeterias and coin cans in restaurants.

Lieberman Case Dropped; Trial Of Lano Starts

Motion to Shift Trial Because of Alleged Costello Link Is Denied

Judge Charles C. Marbury yesterday denied a motion by coin-machine operator Sam Lano to shift his pending trial from Prince Georges County because of "false" rumors linking him to Frank Costello.

As a result of the ruling, Lano faces trial this morning in Prince Georges County Circuit Court on charges of threatening a Brentwood tavern operator.

After the ruling, Lano's counsel, Louis Lebowitz and Robert McCullough, filed a general demurrer to the indictment, charging that "it is not in law sufficient to require the defendant to plead."

The demurrer will be argued this morning, before Judge John B. Gray, jr., Judge Marbury said.

In support of his plea for a change of venue, Lano filed newspaper clippings concerning his arrest and personal history, which he said were prejudiced, sensational and untrue. Yesterday he filed more clippings.

But Judge Marbury said that he had read all the clippings and reached the conclusion that "the publicity is preponderantly favorable rather than unfavorable to the defendant."

Lano is the sole owner of Maryland Sales, an unincorporated company that buys pinball and console-type slot machines and leases them "for amusement only" to taverns and private clubs.

He is indicted for allegedly threatening John Duffy, proprietor of Duffy's Tavern at 4308 Rhode Island ave., just over the District Line. Two of Lano's machines were in the tavern. The indictment charges that Lano "did threaten to accuse the said Duffy of a crime of an indictable nature, to wit, the crime of having obtained money under false pretenses."

Lano has publicly denied that he has any connection with Frank Costello or "any other mobsters."

'Sure Thing' Game Held Gambling Nevertheless

If a man runs a card game that is a sure thing for himself and doesn't give the suckers—beg pardon, customers—a chance, then he's not gambling, and hasn't set up a gaming table.

This was the contention of Ignatius J. Keane, defense attorney for Leonard E. Coleman, 49, of 1807 California st. nw., and John D. Lynch, 56, of 1306 Euclid st. nw. He appealed their gaming conviction in Hyattsville Police Court to Judge Charles C. Marbury in Prince Georges Circuit Court. Involved was a three card monte game allegedly operated by Coleman and Lynch at a construction job.

But Judge Marbury said that whether or not the other players had a chance, it certainly was gaming. He affirmed six months imprisonment sentences imposed on both defendants.

Wife Replies To Grosvenor Divorce Suit

Mrs. Helen Rowland Grosvenor yesterday denied she deserted the matrimonial bedroom or that she refused to let her editor husband be commodore of the fashionable Gibson Island Yacht Club.

These and 20 other allegations made by her husband, Melville Grosvenor of 600 Grosvenor la., Bethesda, assistant editor of the National Geographic Magazine, were included in a blanket denial she filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court to his earlier divorce suit.

Mrs. Grosvenor's conduct was always "kind, affectionate and above reproach," she stated. Her husband had charged that her "neglect and cruel and inhuman treatment" and "failure to conduct herself as a wife should" caused him to leave the home they then occupied at 2901 Woodland dr. nw. on February 16, 1948, under a physician's care.

Mrs. Grosvenor, who now lives at 3031 Sedgwick st. nw., denied that her conduct "in any way impaired his physical or mental health."

Her husband charged that he was forced to receive treatment at a Washington hospital and a Towson (Md.) mental institution as a result of her actions.

Specific denial was entered to Grosvenor's statement that he discovered, on return from a West Indies cruise early in 1948, that she had moved to a bedroom in another part of the house. Mrs. Grosvenor denied she had "ever occupied any bedroom other than that (her husband's) during 23 years of married life."

The answer denied categorically that Mrs. Grosvenor had in any way objected to her husband's assumption of the yacht club's top post, caused him to resign it, or ridiculed his efforts while in office.

The appointment was cited in Grosvenor's suit as a signal honor in yachting circles.

Government Asks Dismissal After Finding Witness' Memory 'Unclear'

The Government lost another decision in its antigambling fight in Distrct Court yesterday with the dismissal of the case against Louis Lieberman, one of the 36 men indicted last April by the special gambling grand jury.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff granted the dismissal—asked by the Government after being told that the memory of the only Government witness against Liberman had become "unclear."

The witness, James H. Jones, a Postoffice Department employe, told the Government and the gambling grand jury last March that he had bet on horse races in a store operated by Lieberman at 1704 7th st. nw.

Assistant United States Attorney John C. Conliff, jr., told Judge Holtzoff that since Jones could no longer remember the circumstances surrounding the alleged gambling, the Government no longer had a case against Lieberman. The charge was setting up a gaming place for the purpose of betting on horse races.

Judge Holtzoff said he wondered how men with "such memories" could hold responsible Government positions.

One Convicted To Date

The special gambling grand jury handed down 12 indictments involving 36 men more than seven months ago. To date only one man has been convicted. Cases against three have been dropped. One man has been acquitted. A month-long trial of 14 ended in a hung jury.

After granting the dismissal, Judge Holtzoff also rearranged the schedule of trials resulting from the 12 indictments handed down by the gambling grand jury.

The case of Attilio Acalotti, alias Till Alcott, indicted gambler charged with obstructing justice by threatening a Government witness, was postponed from yesterday until Wednesday. The continuance was made at the request of Acalotti's counsel, Charles E. Ford, who told Judge Holtzoff that he was prepared to defend his client on any of the three gambling charges against him, but not on the threat indictment.

Retrial Date Changed

The retrial of William "Snags" Lewis and 13 others, charged with operating a 14-million-dollar-a-year gambling syndicate, was changed from January 9 to February 2. Their first trial ended November 26 with a hung jury. Judge Holtzoff told the Government prosecutor, William Hitz, yesterday that "related gambling cases" should be tried before Lewis is retried.

Lewis is charged with Acalotti and Frank Billeci, 509 Margaret dr., Silver Spring, Md., with promoting a numbers lottery. That case was scheduled yesterday for January 9.

Acalotti and Umberto "Chi-Chi" D'Ambrosio, 1227 New York ave. nw., are charged with setting up a gaming table to bet on horse races. That case was scheduled yesterday for January 23.

With Frederick C. Whiteoak, 1504 Oates st. ne., and Ralph Caparotti, alias Rags Costello, 1124 Oates st. ne., Acalotti is also charged with setting up a gaming table to bet on horse races. All three were Times-Herald circulation men when they were indicted. They will be tried on January 30.

Meanwhile, an extradition hearing will be held in District Court this morning on Lewis and the 13 codefendants, all of whom face similar charges in Prince Georges County. United States Attorney George Morris Fay said yesterday that the Government will oppose their extradition "at this time." He said Prince Georges County States Attorney A. Gwynn Bowie has agreed not to press his demands for extradition of the defendants until their District of Columbia cases have been disposed of.

Citizenship Case

Woman Wins Court Fight For Husband

A naturalized American woman will be reunited with her Italian husband as a result of an opinion handed down yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals for the District.

The court reversed the District Court and found itself in disagreement with an earlier opinion in a similar case handed down by the Second Circuit Court of Appeals.

Yesterday's case revolved around the citizenship of Theresa Bertoldi of the Bronx, N. Y. Mrs. Bertoldi, born in Italy, came to this country in 1937 at the age of 15 to join her father, who had been naturalized here seven years previously. Under the Naturalization Act, her citizenship would begin five years after she began to reside permanently in the United States. Thus Mrs. Bertoldi automatically would have become a citizen in 1942.

But in 1941 the Nationality Act of 1940 became effective and changed the earlier act to condition citizenship upon naturalizatoin of both parents instead of only one. However, there was a saving clause which "continued in force and effect . . . actions, suits, matters, proceedings and things" which existed when the newer act came into effect.

In 1946, Mrs. Bertoldi was issued a passport as an American citizen to visit Italy, where she married a childhood sweetheart. But the following year, upon her return here, she was refused permission to bring her husband over as a "preference case" on the grounds that her citizenship status had been changed by the 1940 act.

Immigration authorities based the ruling on a Second Circuit Court of Appeals opinion which held that a person in a similar position as Mrs. Bertoldi had merely an "inchoate citizenship" during the five years of residence and was not protected by the "saving clause."

But the court here held that the time spent in building toward full citizenship rights was "a thing or matter" protected by the saving clause and thereby not affected by the Nationality Act. Mrs. Bertoldi was represented by Attorneys Irving Yaffee and Jack Wasserman.

A torch singer and a trumpet player were charged in five indictments returned here yesterday with a gunpoint holdup, car theft and false pretenses during a sojourn here.

They are Miss Delight F. Mitchell, 23, of Chicago, and Keith W. Cruise, 27, a native of Kearney, Nebr. The FBI said he uses several aliases.

They met in February in Chicago, Miss Mitchell leaving with Cruise on his representation that he was a trumpeter with a prominent jazz band and would get her a job, the FBI said.

The FBI declared that they traced the two across the country because of a series of crimes.

The indictments accuse the man and woman of robbing Donald F. Quinn, room clerk of the Emery Hotel, 1812 G st. nw., of $157. Cruise held the gun and Miss Mitchell bound the victim with tape, the FBI said.

Bad Check, Charge

Miss Mitchell is accused of cashing $300 in bad checks at department stores here. She and Cruise together are charged with taking a stolen car across State lines in their getaway.

In other indictments:

John Leach, 63, of 629 New Jersey ave. nw., is charged with first-degree murder. According to police, he shot Mrs. Carrie Means, 39, of 1702 10th st. nw., in the back. Police said Leach admitted the shooting, claiming that it was the culmination of an argument over another man.

Laura B. Copeland 53, a housemaid, of 1426 Montello ave. ne., was accused of stealing $5305 in jewelry from her employer, Mrs. Elizabeth Y. Dickinson, of 2212 R st. nw.

Jewels In Loot

The loot, recovered, according to police, in Mrs. Copeland's home, included a $3000 platinum, diamond and pearl bar pin, and a $1200 lorgnette.

Joseph P. English, 35, and Robert G. Minton, 44, of the Central Union Mission, were charged with breaking into a club at Walter Reed Hospital and stealing $71.69 from slot machines there.

Charged with taking indecent liberties with young girls were Leroy Parker, 38, of 25 52d st. ne., and John S. Lacovao, 59, of 208 A st. ne.

Indicted for alleged numbers lottery law violations were Evelyn A. Stanley, 29, of 1137 New Jersey ave. se., and Dimps (Rabbit) Haynes, 52, of 634 N st. nw.

Rev. John H. Massie

Edinburg, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Funeral services for the Rev. John H. Massie will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 p. m. at St. John's Methodist Church.

The retired Baptist minister, who died at his home here last night after a lingering illness, will be buried in Cedarwood Cemetery. He was 86.

A native of Alhambra, he came to Shenandoah County in 1903. He retired two years ago after serving pastorates in Ohio, West Virginia and Virginia for 55 years.

F. P. Mellinger

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 5 (AP).—Services for Frederick P. Mellinger, 77, theater operator for many years, will be conducted Tuesday in Philadelphia where he died Saturday. Burial will be in Reading, Pa.

Mr. Mellinger, son of the late Mayor William G. Melinger, had been in the theater business from 1897 until about 15 years ago. With his brother, Warren, he operated the Academy of Music and later the Maryland Theater here.

VA Standards For Training Ex-GI Upheld

The right of the Administrator of Veterans Affairs to set up standards with which a veteran must comply before being granted flight training funds was upheld yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The opinion had the effect of denying flight training to Willie G. Slocumb, jr., a World War II veteran living in Portsmouth, Va. It upheld a former ruling by Federal Judge David A. Pine.

Slocumb, a commercial photographer, had applied for flight training because he wanted to make a career of aerial photography. The VA turned down the application, stating he had failed to establish that his training was in connection with his present or contemplated occupation.

Slocumb backed by Amvets, veterans organization, sued on the grounds that the dictum laid down by VA was illegal and void as an unauthorized modification of the GI bill.

The appellate court held that 'Congress, of course, knew the duty of making such decisions would fall upon the Administrator. Yet it established no standards to govern the quantity or quality of proof to be required as a basis for the determination . . ."

The court also agreed with Pine that the District Court lacked jurisdiction, saying, "The authority of Congress to withhold juricial review here is now beyond question." The court said veterans' benefits are mere gratuities and "the grant of them creates no vested right."

Banks Victors In Fight Over D. C. Tax Rise

Washington banks won a victory in the Supreme Court yesterday in their fight against a higher District tax on gross earnings.

The high court refused to consider the District's appeal from a Court of Appeals decision of last May 31 ordering local banks taxed at 4 percent of gross earnings, less interest paid to depositors, instead of the present 6 percent.

At that time banking officials said the decision would mean a saving of about $225,000 a year for national banks and about $50,000 a year for savings banks. The high court case involved the Hamilton National Bank and the Bank of Commerce & Savings, but six others also are affected.

The legal snarl resulted from District code provisions that national banks pay a 6 percent tax with incorporated savings banks paying only 4 percent. The assessor had ruled that no savings bank in the District fell within the particular classification and he ordered all to pay 6 percent.

'Towers of Georgetown' Wins Best in Artist Show for Lewis

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

Richard Lahey, Vienna, Va., and "Young Girl With Cat"

A painting, "Towers of Georgetown," by John Chapman Lewis, of 309 Whittier st. nw., has been judged best in the fifty-eighth annual exhibition of the Society of Washington Artists.

The exhibition will open Saturday in the Natural History building, 10th st. and Constitution ave. nw., and continue through December 30.

Lewis's painting won the Evening Star $100 prize for the best painting in the show. It is a street scene in rich colors for which the intersection of Wisconsin ave. and M st. served as a "model."

A second $100 award, the Alice Barney Memorial prize, was awarded to Richard Lahey, director of the Corcoran art school, for a painting, "Young Girl With Cat."

Lahey's model is Ruth Ann Pitts, 12-year-old daughter of Malcolm Pitts, an Economic Cooperation Administration official now stationed in Paris. Another painting of Ruth and the cat is in the current Carnegie exhibition in Pittsburgh.

The $50 Frank E. Jelleff award in sculpture went to Jane Love, 5409 Earlston dr. nw., for a sculpture, "Bison," in flint-flecked blue lithium. The $50 E. Thomas Saltz award in painting was given to Omar R. Carrington, 107 Taylor st., Chevy Chase, Md., for his entry, "The North Wind."

The society's medals were awarded as follows:

For sculpture, Russell Houston, 10 W. Saul rd., Kensington, Md., "Torso of a Young Woman"; for figure or portrait, Dick Miller, 2801 31st st. se., "Portrait of an Artist"; for landscape, Elizabeth Benson, 10 W. Underwood st., Chevy Chase, Md., "Autumn Landscape"; for still life and composition, Don Lynn, American University, "Still Life."

Honorable mentions were given "Gaudy Landscape," by Leonard Maurer, 1440 Chapin st. nw., and "Still Life With Fish," by Lois Mailou Jones, 2401 6th st. nw.

Two D. C. Artists Win In Hallmark Contest

Two Washington artists were reported yesterday to be among 14 prize winners in an art contest sponsored by the Hallmark greeting Card Company in New York City which attracted 4158 entries.

The Washington winners of $750 prizes are Robert F. Gates, of Vienna, Va., professor of art at American University, for a painting, "Florist's Christmas," and Samuel Bookatz, 2700 Q st. nw., for a painting, "The Cathedral."

The awardes will be made Wednesday evening at the Wildenstein Galleries, New York City. John D. Hickerson, Assistant Secretary of State for United Nations Affairs, will make the presentations in behalf of Hallmark.

War Hero Who Got City's Key Held as Hit-Run Killer of Three

Baltimore, Dec. 5 (AP).—A merchant seaman who four years ago was given the key to the city as a war hero was accused today in the hit-and-run deaths of three elderly pedestrians.

Three separate manslaughter charges were filed against Walter O. S. Stankiwicz, 33.

Police named him as the driver of an automobile which mowed down and fatally injured 80-year-old John Vogt and two men who were helping Vogt cross a Baltimore street Saturday night. Vogt's companions were Harry Edgett, 65, and Andrew Lockman, 70.

Witnesses said the three men were hurled 65 feet by the impact of the collision and said the automobile sped on its way. They noted the first three digits of the license plates.

Within hours an extensive search of repair garages throughout the city was under way. The search was called off when a maroon sedan was found and traced to Stankiwicz.

At his arraignment in Magistrate's Court this afternoon he pleaded innocent and was released in bail totaling $3000.

Stankiwicz spent two and a half years in a German prison camp after his ship was torpedoed and sunk by a submarine off Norway in July, 1942. He attracted wide attention when he later told newsmen British escort vessels abandoned his convoy to engage German fleet units in battle. Thirty-four ships in the area were sunk by submarines and torpedo bombers within the next two days.

Stankiwicz was hailed as a "hero of the seas" when he was repatriated in 1945. Theodore R. McKeldin, then Mayor of Baltimore, gave him a key to the city in ceremonies at Ctiy Hall.

Mrs. Strong, Of Sugar Loaf Fame, Is Dead

Mrs. Louise Strong, 74, wife of Gordon Strong, owner of the landmark Sugar Loaf Mountain, near Frederick, Md., died yesterday at her home, Stronghold, after a prolonged illness.

Born Louise Snyder, near West Liberty, Iowa, she was the daughter of Abraham H. Snyder, captain in a regiment of Iowa infantrymen who fought in the Civil War.

As a girl she worked her way through a business school in Muscatine, Iowa, then went to Chicago. She entered the firm of Gordon Strong & Co. there in 1904 and 10 years later married its owner.

When Mr. Strong retired, the couple moved to Sugarloaf Mountain to build their home. In 1899 Strong began buying bits of the mountain and is now its owner. The mountain will become a public park upon his death, Strong says.

Private funeral and burial services will be held at the home Wednesday.

Funeral services for Charles L. Hyde, 45, patent attorney, will be held at 10 a. m. Wednesday, in Chambers Funeral Home, 1400 Chapin st. nw. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Mr. Hyde died Sunday at George Washington University Hospital of cancer after being hospitalized two weeks ago. He lived at 943 Bonifant st., Silver Spring.

Born in Cumberland, Md., Mr. Hyde came to Washington in his youth and completed his education at National University Law School.

A member of the District and Maryland Bar Associations, he practiced patent law here for 25 years, with offices at 1311 G st. nw.

Mr. Hyde belonged to the Moose Lodge and Cissel-Saxon Post No. 41, American Legion, Silver Spring.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Martha E. Hyde; father, Herbert Hyde, Cumberland; a son, Ronald Hyde, of the Bonifant st. address, and a stepdaughter Mrs. John A. Schrider, 8401 Woodcliff ct., Silver Spring address.

Sanitary Board Haled Into Court Over Pipe Leak

Two Long Branch Village families haled the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission into Prince Georges County Circuit Court yesterday to have the commission repair a water pipe leak near their homes.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Sanguinetti, 9230 Long Branch pkwy., and Mr. and Mrs. Emory T. Armington, 9232 Long Branch pkwy., charged that the leak developed November 20. On December 1, the couples testified, a commission engineer wrote them to repair it by December 5 or the water would be shut off.

Judge J. Dudley Digges signed an order directing the commission to show cause by 10 a. m. Friday why a preliminary injunction should not be granted.

W. B. Wooden, FTC Counsel, Dies at Home

Walter B. Wooden, 67, associate general counsel for the Federal Trade Commission and chief of its division of appellate proceedings, died yesterday of heart attack at his home, 2012 Hayden rd. ne.

Mr. Wooden

Mr. Wooden, a Government attorney for 44 years, was the FTC crackdown expert on the basing point system. He represented FTC in the case against the Cement Institute.

Initiated in 1936, the action was finally decided in April, 1948, by the Supreme Court, which upheld the FTC contention that the basing point system was an illegal means of fixing prices and restraining trade. Some 70 cement producers were charged with the trade-restraining conspiracy.

CSC Law Clerk

Born in Columbus, Ind., Mr. Wooden was graduated from Indiana University with an LL.B. degree in 1905. He worked for a year as law clerk for the Civil Service Commission, then, from 1907 to 1914, was a special agent with the old Bureau of Corporations, then in the Department of Commerce.

He had been with the FTC since its establishment in 1914. From 1915 to 1924 he was an attorney examiner and then counsel in charge of the Chicago office. The next 13 years he was a special attorney in trying cases. In 1939 he was named assistant chief counsel and in 1946 became associate general counsel.

In addition to trial work before the FTC and in the courts, he often represented the commission before congressional committees regarding proposed legislation affecting the agency. He wrote many articles on the antimonopoly field for law journals and law reviews.

Praised by Commissioners

When news of his death was received yesterday, the Commissioners adopted a resolution lauding Mr. Wooden for "his fidelity to duty, his unwavering courage, his tireless energy, his capacity for friendship and his consistent devotion to the public interest."

He was a member of Riverdale Presbyterian Church and former president of the board of trustees. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eva Phyllis Jourdan Wooden; two children, Eugene J. Wooden, Bethesda, and Mrs. David Modell, Washington; two brothers, Arthur Wooden, Madison Ind., and William Wooden, North Vernon, Ind., and two grandchildren.

Lois Gallimore Dies; County GOP Worker

Mrs. Lois A. Gallimore, 40, active in Republican politics in Prince Georges County for more than 12 years, died yesterday at Prince Georges General Hospital after an illness of six weeks.

Mrs. Gallimore was a charter member of the Republican Club of Prince Georges County and a member of the Maryland State Federation of Republican Women. She was a county delegate to the State convention in 1948.

In 1944 she was named by the Republican Party as chairman of its fund-raising campaign for Prince Georges General Hospital. She was also active in the county's Independent Trade Association.

She was born in Stuart, Va., and educated in the schools there. She moved to Prince Georges County 12 years ago. She is survived by her husband, Marvin S. Gallimore, and a son by a former marriage, Charles McIntosh, who live at 3001 Kenilworth ave. Bladensburg, Md.

Funeral services and burial will be held Thursday at Tom's Creek Baptist Church, Denton, N. C.

Mary O'Reilly, Retired Aide At Mint, Dies

Slender, gray-haired Mary M. O'Reilly, who was assistant director of the Mint for 14 years and had the distinction of having her tenure of office extended by presidential order three times, died yesterday at Doctors Hospital.

Miss O'Reilly

The quiet-mannered woman, who served under five Mint directors and seven Presidents during her 36 years of Government work, was stricken early yesterday. Her family said she died at 3:30 p. m., following a cerebral hemorrhage. She was 84 years old.

Miss O'Reilly, whose services at the Mint were once described by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as "indispensable," retired in 1938 after rising from a temporary Treasury clerk in 1903 to assistant director when the post was created by Congress in 1924.

Consulted as Authority

On several occasions as acting director of the Mint she was called before Congressional committees as an authority on coins and coinage systems. Her duties were largely administrative and advisory.

Cleaning out her desk drawers upon her retirement, she stated, "I am getting rid of 33 years' accumulation of useless papers." Her ambition then, she said, was merely to read and knit and munch apples. And she did practically that for 11 years while she lived at the Hay-Adams House, 16th and H sts. nw. Her friends said she maintained excellent health until about a year ago.

Lived in New Orleans

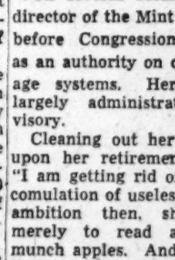
Born in Springfield, Mass., and educated at Worcester, she later moved to New Orleans, where she was appointed to Government service.

She was awarded the Via Veritas Medal in 1934 by the Catholic College of Our Lady of Elms in Springfield—an annual award to an outstanding Catholic laywoman. She was a member of St. Matthew's Catholic Church here.

Miss O'Reilly is survived by two nephews, John Keating jr., of New York City, and John O'Reilly, Worcester, and two nieces, Mrs. Anthony Athy and Mrs. Anna O'Reilly Donnelly, Worcester.

Ulrey Biller Dead in Texas; NFFE Officer

Funeral services were held in Dallas, Tex., yesterday for Ulrey J. Biller, a former national vice president of the National Federation of Federal Employes and a long-time officer of both Local No. 2 and the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes' Unions, of the NFFE.



Mr. Biller

Mr. Biller, who was 85, had been living in Dallas several years. Interment will be in that city. A Pension Office employe for many years, he retired in 1933.

Mr. Biller was an authority on the Federal retirement system and had served as chairman of the retirement committee at numerous conventions of the NFFE, which he joined virtually at its inception, working for improvement of Federal personnel administration.

Members of the NFFE in Dallas attended the funeral and local and State officials there represented the National, Local No. 2, and the D. C. Federation.

Born in Indiana, Mr. Biller entered the Pension Office here in the '90s and Washington was his residence for more than 40 years.

He was predeceased by his wife and daughter. Surviving are a grandson and several nieces and nephews.

Time Marched on Tiptoe for the Patrick Hurleys

By Marie McNair

MOST of the guests at Gen. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley's cocktail party yesterday could remember the marriage of beautiful Ruth Wilson to Pat Hurley, the dashing Oklahoman, which took place 30 years ago.

Time has marched on since then but it passed lightly over the years for Ruth Hurley, who looked not much older than the day that she was a bride. There are four grown children now. Two, Mary and Wilson, were there yesterday, along with old friends of the Hurleys who had been asked to celebrate the event.

One of the handsomest women in Washington, Mrs. Hurley wore a simple gown, straight lined, of dull blue velvet with a sash which tied with a flare at the back. Mary Hope Hurley, as blond as her mother once was, and every bit as pretty, wore a satin jacket dress in electric blue, while the one-time Secretary of War sported a red carnation in the buttonhole of his dark suit.

Lavish Floral Decoration Used

THE Hurley's house on Massachusetts ave., Italian in influence, has magnificent tapestries on the walls, and old brocade on the furnishings. Draperies of antique blue velvet hang at the ceiling-high windows. Yesterday a frieze of pale pink poinsettias decorated the stone fireplace and everywhere there were red roses and giant chrysanthemums.

Here was a party for "old Washington," with only a few of General and Mrs. Hurley's official friends to be found.

The Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wellington Koo were there, for General Hurley, has a particular place in his heart for China, where he served as our Ambassador during a period of the war. Mme. Pandit, Ambassador of India, was an early caller who stayed on, leaving only in time for the embassy staff party in her honor. The Luxembourg Minister, Hugues LeGallais, was also there.

Art Fanciers Applaud Paintings

THE Mexican Ambassador and Senora de la Colina, both connoisseurs of art, were gazing in admiration at four paintings of brilliant New Mexico scenes done by young Wilson Hurley, who was modestly taking bows. Wilson, who calls himself "Sitting Bull," is a crack shot and an expert rider, having learned both during the months he spent at his parents' home near Santa Fe.

Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador, in black with a stole of black fox over her arm, chatted with Mrs. Morris Cafritz, who had pinned a walnut sized emerald and diamond pin to her shoulder and wore a tiny hat with feathers to match.

Guests Gather In Small Clusters

I SAW Dr. Stanley Hornbeck chatting with Clarence Hewes and Lothrop Stoddard, while little Mrs. Hornbeck got together with Mrs. Harold Walker.

Gen. and Mrs. Wade Haislip were the center of a group. Robert Woods Bliss and Charles Carroll Glover were there but I didn't see their wives, and bachelor Col. Pendleton Hogan was one of the centers of attraction.

Mrs. Mitchell Palmer was in her usual good spirits, and through the throng I saw white egrets on the white hat of Mrs. William MacCracken; the winter white hat of Mrs. Randall Hagner and the mass of black ostrich on Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard's brimmed hat.

Mrs. Philip Rhineander had only to come from her house next door. Others there were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt, Lady Lewis, Mrs. McCook Knox, Eric Johnston and his daughter, Elizabeth (or was it Harriet?) I also saw Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Fred Roy, the James Houghtelings, and Col. Alf Heiberg and Mrs. Heiberg, Louise getting a warm welcome after being out of circulation for several months.

A very special guest was pretty Rosalind Morgan, whose parents, the James Dudley Morgans, were married at the Hurley home in Oklahoma.

Arrives From England To Visit Parents

Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams and her little daughter, Sarah Fenno Williams, have arrived from England to spend the holidays with Mrs. Williams' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. Last May, Mrs. Williams was presented at the Court of St. James. Colonel Williams, who is stationed in England, will arrive by air at a later date to join his family.

Give First Party In New House

ADMIRAL and Mrs. A. Toutant Beauregard, who have recently returned to Washington to live, gave their first party yesterday since they arrived from California less than a month ago.

They've bought Mrs. Harry G. Meem's house on 34th pl., but expect to lease it after Christmas when they go to Rio de Janeiro where Admiral Beauregard was head of the United States Naval Mission for several years.

Here for a short visit are Admiral and Mrs. Beauregard's son-in-law and daughter, Comdr. and Mrs. Porter Bedell, and their daughters, from the Naval Station at Jacksonville, Fla. Expected down from New York for the party were Mrs. Beauregard's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mullally. They were forced to postpone their visit, however, and will arrive later this week.

Awaiting New Diplomatic Post

GEN. AND MRS. WADE HAISLIP will entertain at a cocktail party this afternoon—one in a series—for Jefferson Patterson, former United States Ambassador to Egypt, and Mrs. Patterson, who are in Washington until Mr. Patterson receives a new assignment.

Mr. and Mrs. Patterson are visiting Mr. Patterson's brother-in-law and sister, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Howard C. Davidson at their Georgetown home and their farm in St. Marys County, Md. General and Mrs. Davidson will have a family party for Christmas Day at Cremona, in St. Marys County, with Mr. and Mrs. Patterson in the group.

General and Mrs. Davidson will be hosts at dinner Friday evening in honor of the Egyptian Ambassador and Mme. Abdul Rahim.

Reception Follows Chopin Concert

A RECEPTION was held last evening at the Polish Embassy following the concert given by the Library of Congress in commemoration of the centennial of the death of Frederic Chopin. The concert was given by the Albeneri Trio and Doda Conrad, Polish baritone, in the Coolidge Auditorium at 8:30 p. m.

Guests at the reception were received in the embassy drawing room by the Ambassador and Mme. Winiewicz.

Miss Garcia's Portrait Viewed at Party

MRS. LUCILE ROBERTSON MARSHALL of New York and Palm Beach has just completed a portrait of Miss Nan Garcia, and yesterday she invited a few friends of Miss Garcia in to view the portrait. The party was held from 5 to 7 p. m. in Mrs. Marshall's apartment at the Shoreham Hotel.

Talented and pretty Miss Garcia is doing a daily radio show "Brunch with Nan and Bill" on WQQW at 12 noon. Mrs. Marshall, author of "Photo Oil Coloring for Fun or Profit," has studios in New York, Paris, and Florence. She will be in Washington for the winter.

DATE-BOOK DATA

Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Robert L. Eichelberger will entertain at cocktails Thursday.

'Colonial' Debutantes to Bow At Junior Assembly Dec. 21

NINE of the season's debutantes who have colonial ancestry will be presented at the twelfth annual Junior Assembly ball to be held at the Sulgrave Club on Wednesday, December 21.

This year's debs, along with the debutantes of previous seasons and other members of the assembly, will participate in the traditional and colorful cotillion figures to the tune of "18th Century Drawing Room."

In the chosen group are Miss Cornelia Bingham, daughter of Mrs. James Cunningham; Miss Joyce Ebel, daughter of Mrs. Katherine K. Ebel and niece of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Bell; Miss Margaret Glenn, daughter of the Rev. Dr. C. Leslie Glenn; the Misses Elizabeth and Winifred MacGowan, daughters of Mrs. Bryant S. Cooper; Miss Betsy Goodloe Porter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Porter and the Misses Helen and Sue Eileen Walker, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Walker.

Sponsors of the Junior Assembly are the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bell, Mrs. Wade Hampton Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. David St. Pierre Gaillard, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm W Hill, Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d, Mrs. Andrew Calhoun Pickens, and Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley Willard.

James T. Clark is chairman of the executive committee of the ball and Miss Laura Poll. Wyatt is vice chairman. Other members are Miss Flavia Lee, secretary; Jack G. van Deventer, treasurer; Miss Polly Norment, David B. Nicholson and Miss Mary-Stuart Price, past chairman.

Budget Is Barometer Of History, Pace Tells Democrat Woman's Club

By Genevieve Reynolds

EIGHTY percent of every tax dollar goes for national defense, veterans' payments, international affairs and interest on the national debt, declared Director of the Budget Frank Pace, jr., yesterday. He spoke at a luncheon meeting of the Woman's National Democratic Club at club headquarters, 1526 New Hampshire ave. He pointed out that in 1950, 13 billion dollars will be spent for national defense, over 6 billion dollars for veterans, 6.7 billion dollars in the international field and over 5.5 billion dollars on national debt interest.

How different today's world is from that of 10 years ago is reflected in the amount of the total budget and how it is divided, according to the Budget Director. In 1939 the average tax payer paid $8 for national defense, 15 cents for international affairs, $4 for veterans, $7 on National debt interest and $49 on all other items.

In 1950 the taxpayer will give $85 to national defense, $42 to the international field, $45 to veterans, $38 on the debt interest and $80 for all other items.

In order to inform the American taxpayer about governmental expenditures, the Budget Bureau is preparing a 44-page booklet, entitled "Budget in Brief." It will be released and distributed along with President Truman's budget message in January 1950. Pace announced J. C. Stokes, member of the Budget Bureau, will be author of the booklet.

Affirms Government Problem

ACCORDING to Pace, "President Truman is not crying 'wolf' when he discusses the problem of finding qualified men for Government service."

Pace contended that it is often difficult to get topnotch men to enter Government service. He said that in order to get the best possible talent, he has talked to student groups

Mrs. Oscar Chapman introduced the speaker. Mrs. Julian Friant, club president, presided, and announced that Vice President Barkley and Mrs. Barkley will be guests of honor at a reception given by the club February 6 at the Shoreham Hotel. She also announced that Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Secretary of State, is a new member of the club.

Hear Indian Woman Speaker

OVER 400 members of the Sisterhood of Adas Israel Congregation yesterday heard Miss Esther Gershone tell the dramatic history of the Jewish colony in India. Occasion was the organization's annual Hannukah donor luncheon held at the Mayflower.

Esther Gershone

Miss Gershone of Karachi said that her Jewish ancestors were shipwrecked off the shores of India, 20 miles south of Bombay, 2000 years ago. The small band of survivors kept alive the religious practices and observances of Judaism.

"In India, Jews have dwelt in peace for 200 years," she said. "India is one of the few countries which never dreamt of persecuting us."

Now a student at the Jewish Theological Seminary, Miss Gershone is preparing to become a religious teacher in the small Jewish colony of Benes Israel in India.

Other features of the program included songs by Cantor Jacob Barkin; greeting by Joseph A. Wilner, president of the congregation; an address by Rabbi Solomon H. Metz; piano solos by Miss Verna Wolf Diamond; an opening prayer by Mrs. Henry Gichner, and the benediction by the Rev. Samuel Weiss.

Mrs. Hyman Berman, donor luncheon chairman, reported that over $4500 had been raised at the luncheon. Mrs. Philip Goldstein, Sisterhood president, presided.

Tired of Fashion's Whim? Thing to Try Is a Sari; Here's How to Wind One

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

QUITE THE most fascinating sight in Washington is Mrs. Corea, wife of the Ambassador from Ceylon, winding her sari.

Mrs. Corea, who's tiny and svelte, owns more than a hundred saris of every imaginable hue. They're all made of pure silk, the design plus the border woven into the whole cloth and shot as well as embroidered with thread made of real silver dipped in gold.

In ten minutes, without using hook, eye, zipper or pin, Mrs. Corea styles her own dress. Underneath the sari she wears a long petticoat topped by a tightly fitting, sleeveless satin blouse. Around her waist is a thin cord belt with one of those trick buckles which keeps the belt from loosening.

She takes a corner of the sari, tucks it in the belt, passes it around her, then deftly makes about twelve three-to-four-inch pleats, holding them firm as she pleats, and finally tucking the pleated end mid-center of the belt. The material is then pulled up under the left arm and over the right shoulder.

On the bosom, the sari may be pleated or left plain, or the border smoothed in a single wide fold to show off its design. The silk is so stiff that once pleated it stays miraculously in place.

It is also so warm that even in this chill weather Mrs. Corea never wears an outer wrap. When going from door to car, she merely drapes the sari's loose end over her bare shoulder.

No matter how you look at it, wearing a sari is the handiest way to dress. Mrs. Corea never has to bother with fashion's whims, she always looks soignee and, when traveling, she can pack 30 or 40 saris in a tiny suitcase.

Thanks for the Tip, Boys

OF LATE there have been breast-beating displays among the more distinguished Washington Post contributors—written displays which have, handily enough, used up considerable copy space.

Only last week drama critic Richard Coe related how a wartime buddy from dear old Cairo twitted him publicly on added curvaceousness. The buddy, a magician fortuitously spotted by Coe during a vaudeville performance in New York's Palace Theater, then proceeded to saw Coe in half—probably in a desperate effort to whittle him back into prewar shape!

Next the Alsop brothers, Joseph and Stewart, did a column around the fact that Vishinsky, in U. N. session, dubbed them "congenital murderers" and "bandits of the pen."

After disclosing the fascinating fact that Dr. Webster, who murdered Harvard's aristocratic professor Dr. Parkman, was either their "great-great-great uncle" or "first cousin nine times removed," they devoted the remaining space to showing why the brothers write in such a way as to expose themselves to stinging epithet.

Though unlike Coe, we've never been sawed in half and, of late, have been complimented on the remains of an Ida Jean Kain figure; and, though, unlike the Alsops we have no known murders in the immediate family, we can compete with all three reporters and take honor title to even fancier and certainly more widespread abuse.

Back in 1945 when we were expelled from Yugoslavia, due to the then Soviet-Yugoslav coziness, the expulsion order came straight from Tito and described OUR reporting as "tendentious" (a heavenly word often used in diplomatic gobble-de-gook and roughly meaning "fighty") "willful distortion of government information" and title-of-honor of title-of-honors—an all round menace to Yugoslav national safety!

Next, in Hungary, a Racosi strongman labeled one of our sprightlier vignettes as typical example of "dirty bourgeois thinking," while the following year Ana Pauker's Communist gazettes somewhat unimaginatively branded us triply as "fascist, reactionary and liar."

Though neither Coe nor the Alsops can claim such an accumulation of personal invective, without their inspiration we'd never have been smart enough to cash in on it! Spasibo, tovarishchi!

Miss Jean Law Tyler, Robert Koteen, to Be Married

Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Tyler of St. Louis, Mo., and Washington, D. C., announce the engagement of their daughter, Jean Law, to Robert Koteen, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Koteen of Norfolk, Va.

Miss Tyler, who made her debut in St. Louis last Christmas, is a descendant of Gen. Robert Lewis who settled in Virginia in 1635. She attended John Burroughs School in St. Louis, the University of Wisconsin and Goucher College. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority and a junior member of the Congressional Country Club.

A graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, Mr. Koteen received his law degree from the University of Virginia. He is now employed as a legal adviser to Commissioner E. M. Webster of the Federal Communications Commission.

Ideal, Devoted, Hardworking Husband, So His Wife Says, Is Worried by Her Recent Pastime of Flirting With Wolves While Airing Children

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A prompt reply may be the means of saving our home. I have been married for 12 years, and to quote my wife, I have been an ideal, devoted and hardworking husband; and I may say that she too has been a faithful industrious spouse.

We have never had much money, and now that we have three children she works only to give them the best. Almost every day she takes the children for an outing, and very often meets male flirts who are on the prowl for dissatisfied matrons.

Our trouble lies in the conversations Josie has with strange men. They sympathize with her for working hard and wind up by asking her out for an evening. She has never accepted; but to my dismay she returns to the same meeting place and permits the man to continue asking for a date. Lately we have had almost daily arguments over this situation.

Her Contrite Air Turns to Defiance

JOSIE CONTENDS that since she doesn't go out with these flirts, it is merely a form of diversion to accept compliments from them. I contend she is showing a lamentable change in her attitude towards cheating on husbands. To explain, she once cried and confessed that one man had her on the verge of believing it wasn't wrong. But today she says I'm old fashioned and narrow minded, that there is no harm in these flirtatious conversations.

Many times Josie and I have been pointed out as a model couple; but the way things have been going lately, I am afraid our marriage is threatened. There is only one girl on this earth for me, and if she goes back on me—. Well, words fail me. Please tell me what is right or wrong. A. B.

Treat the Factors That Fuel Folly

DEAR A. B.: The truth is, Josie doesn't know what she is doing or why, in having playful conversations with male flirts on the prowl. And you may take some consolation from her habit of duly confiding the substance of these talks to you, because it means that she identifies herself with you, is basically attached to you, wants no secrets from you, etc.

Both of you need to understand that these pick-up exchanges aren't the crux of the trouble that threatens the marriage. Rather they are symptoms of a growing log-jam of frustration in Josie's feelings, caused by defects within the relationship, or in the domestic routine, or possibly in Josie's make-up, that you and she must search out and correct.

To illustrate factors that may be fueling Josie's foolish friendliness in the streets, here are a few suggestions: 1. Social isolation due to poverty. 2. Emotional loneliness—often felt by the matron whose husband fails to be a companion in spirit, erroneously thinking it's enough to be her lover and provider. 3. Arrested development within her "psychology," in the sense that she may cling unconsciously to a teen-ager's dreams of perfect bliss with the ideal man—hence would unconsciously resent the "ordinary" portion of reality she has.

Negative Character Is Difficult, Too

YOU DESCRIBE yourself as an ideal, devoted and hardworking spouse, then speak of Josie as the only girl on earth for you, without whose allegiance you couldn't go on.—all of which, when combined with your anxious sufferance of Josie's problem-behavior, and your need to be told right from wrong, suggests that you may be a pretty limp character in double harness, instead of a mature partner and positive force for good in the family relationship.

It is a common fallacy to imagine that anxious dependency (in association) is the same thing as real devotion, or that passivity of temperament and reclusive habits—negative reactions to life—are the equivalent of moral strength and resolutely fine behavior. This I mention to give you the pitch of honest self-study, because I think it's important to "know thyself" in order to improve your influence on Josie.

Now for Josie's protection I wish to point out that prowling flirts when diagnosed almost invariably are found to be morons or mentally sick, often with a police record of disorderly conduct, which means (1) their overtures are no compliment and (2) the woman who encourages their approach is courting danger, and in her naivete may become a victim of criminal violence. So quite aside from considerations of manners and morals, let her beware! Finally, as further guidance to both of you, study Dr. Edmund Bergler's latest books "Divorce Won't Help" and "Conflict in Marriage," which expound in conversational style some inside causes and possible correctives of problems like yours. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Remote Control Helps Italian Yule Bazaar

Although still abroad, Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, executive chairman of the Christmas bazaar to be held at the Italian Embassy tomorrow from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., has made arrangements for her food table by remote control. And so there are to be good Italian wines and vermouth, cheeses, imported spaghetti and "panettoni," an Italian cake made only for Christmas time. Sweets, such as glazed fruits, and stuffed dates attractively boxed, are among the delicacies to be on sale at this attractive booth.

Over-all chairman of the benefit, proceeds from which go to various charitable organizations in Italy caring for orphaned and maimed children, is Signora Tarchiana, wife of the Ambassador, through whose tireless energy and enthusiasm the lower floor of the embassy at 2700 16th st. has been converted into a gay holiday mart.

The fete is open to the public. There will be no admission fee, but a small charge for tea and Italian cakes which Mrs. George Maurice Morris and her committee members will serve throughout the afternoon.

About How to Build Service in Silver Pattern

I am building a service in silver with the "Fairfax" pattern. I have service for six in forks, knives, teaspoons and salad folks. I do not entertain lavishly or formally. Considering this, would you offer suggestions as to the most essential silver to buy next? Which could be used for double duty? For example, how interchangeable are teaspoons, soup spoons, dessert spoons, etc.? Or, if one cannot buy all, which would be the most essential in building a practical service for six? Is there a silver plate of a similar design to "Fairfax"? M. A. L.

Butter spreaders and then cream soup spoons should probably be next on your silver shopping list. Those pieces are usually considered essential in a flat silver service. The following list gives additional pieces which you may wish to acquire in the order in which they would be bought—most needed are first on the list:

Two or three tablespoons, extra teaspoons (teaspoons can be used for many of the same purposes and are therefore used more frequently than dessert spoons), iced teaspoons, oyster forks, sugar spoon, gravy ladle, after-dinner coffee spoons, cold meat fork, butter knife for serving, large serving spoon, carving or steak set.

The most essential pieces would be butter spreaders, cream soup spoons, tablespoons, extra teaspoons and possibly a cold meat fork.

Fairfax is a classic sixteenth century design. There are designs in plated silver which are similar but do not match. If you wish to choose plated wear to use with your sterling, the best way to decide upon a pattern is to visit a store which carries both plated and sterling. When you see the patterns together you will know which is the most suitable.

I would appreciate your advising where I could get the metal eyelets put in cotton shower curtains which I am making. H. N. H.

There is a shop on 12th st. nw. which will insert the eyelets for you. Call them at Sterling 7099 and ask for Mr. Irving.

If you make many shower curtains you may like to know that eyelets and equipment for inserting them can be purchased quite reasonably at a shop on 14th st. which sells leather working supplies. For further information about this equipment call the shop at Executive 0961.

I have a gray Chinese kidskin coat that is in perfect condition, with one exception. It sheds! Is there anything that can be done about this? D. W.

Shedding of a coat can be much reduced by asking your furrier to put it through a regular fur process designed to remove loose hair and stop or cut down shedding. I am told that such treatments are very helpful.

ATTENTION J. B.: You can also have ice buckets relined at a firm on 12th st. in their own shop. For further information call the firm at District 5363.

I have placed family snapshots of assorted sizes in a large album. For mounting these I used regular mounting corners. Some of the older photographs are begining to change color. I would like to know if there is any kind of paper, etc., that could be used between (black) pages to help prevent yellowing with age. If so, where may it be obtained? M. A. L.

Keeping the pictures away from light as you are doing by mounting them in an album is the most you can do to prevent discoloration. When photographic prints turn brown or fade, it indicates that they weren't well finished in the beginning—either not sufficiently "fixed" with chemicals or not thoroughly rinsed. The surest way to preserve the pictures is to have them recopied by a responsible photo finisher who will properly fix and wash the prints to insure permanency.

What can I do with long, old fashioned radiators under a window other than painting them? A. G. McC.

You could have a wooden cover with an open-grilled front built to cover the radiator. This would give a shelf for decorative objects. Or, a window seatcover over the radiator is attractive. If you use gay-printed cretonne for padding on the seat it gives a really attractive spot of color in the room. A cover over a radiator will save your curtains from becoming so soiled because it will deflect the heat currents into the room instead of upward, carrying dust into the curtains. When placing a cover of any sort over the radiator, be sure to allow an inch or two of space between the radiator top and the cover to allow escape of hot air.

Do you know where it is possible to obtain a food product known as MPF, developed to be sent abroad to persons living on a starvation diet, and originally handled by the cooperative stores? E. S. H.

I haven't been able to find an outlet in the city for this product. I suggest you write direct to the firm which manufactures it and ask them where it may be purchased in this area. The firm is Meals for Millions Foundation, Inc., 648 South Broadway, Los Angeles, California.

Can you tell me how to get rid of fleas in a rug? E.S.H.

Spraying the rug, both sides, with a 5 percent DDT oil solution should rid it of fleas in one application. If you have a pet sleeping in the house, spray with special care places where he has the habit of lying down. If the pet sleeps in the basement, sprinkle 10 percent DDT dust on the basement floor and into cracks and crevices. The 10 percent DDT can be used with safety on a dog, but do not use around a cat for the cat may lick enough off to poison it.

Doubled Arms Urged To Keep U. S. at Peace

America should double its expenditures for armaments, providing for a 150-group Air Force, if war with Russia is to be avoided, a Georgetown University professor of geopolitics said last night.

"If we continue our present false economy in armaments, there will be no stopping on the road to war, and no stopping on the road to communism," Dr. Stefan T. Possony told an audience of 400 persons at Gonzaga High School auditorium.

The Austrian-born professor argued the negative in a debate on the question, "Is War Inevitable Between Democratic and Communistic Nations Under Present Soviet Philosophies and Procedures?"

It was the second in a series sponsored by the Washington General Assembly of the Knights of Columbus.

On the affirmative was Edward P. Morgan, an attorney and former administrative assistant to J. Edgar Hoover. Morgan said World War III is as inevitable "as the sun rising tomorrow morning."

Russia is dedicated to world domination," Morgan said. Its formula is "self-preservation of the Soviet Union plus the elimination of capitalist encirclement equals the final victory of socialism."

War with Russia will be avoided "if and when the United States decides to pay the price for peace," Dr. Possony said.

This Nation must retain "superiority of military strength absolutely beyond argument," he added, suggesting expenses be doubled and a 150-group Air Force be built.

Postlude

Library Trio Plays Early Chopin Work

By Paul Hume

Frederic Chopin was a great composer of piano music.

The centennial of his death was observed last night in a concert at the Library of Congress. The Albeneri Trio played his early work for violin, piano, and cello. Benar Heifetz and Erich Itor Kahn played the late cello sonata. Doda Conrad sang 12 of the 17 songs which are Chopin's only vocal literature.

No such Chopin concert can truly evoke the great composer's spirit. He is remembered, and properly so, for the mighty scherzi, ballades, etudes and preludes as well as for sonatas, waltzes, nocturnes, and polonaises.

The cello sonata has its moments. Certainly it was well played last night with Heifetz yielding to the greater interest and volume of the piano.

The songs are largely a matter of convenient lyrical lines superimposed over typical Chopin piano writing. One feels in them the grace of a Chopin waltz, the movement of mazurka. But one rarely finds them compelling as song literature when compared with the songs of Schubert and Schumann, or those of that other great piano composer of the same period, Liszt.

Conrad sang them with easy authority in his, and their, native Polish. His voice leaves much to the listener's imagination in intonation, precison of attack and so forth. Its lower middle range is full and sonorous. The rest seemed strangely absent last night.

But we may be wrong. There was a lady present who added an enthralled "ah" after nearly every number on the program.

Air Force, Navy To Pay $90 'Bonus' To Thousands

NYHT News Service

Thousands of enlisted men and women in the Air Force and Navy will receive a pre-Christmas "bonus" of $90 apiece from their respective services—because this amount was withheld from their October and November pay under an erroneous interpretation of the new military pay bill.

Army personnel will not share the holiday windfall. The reason is that they've already had it—and probably spent it. This service made its own contrary interpretation of the same law, despite unification, and has been sustained in its judgment by the comptroller general.

Both the Air Force and the Navy have sent priority radio messages to all their domestic and overseas commands ordering them to reinstate the deductions as quickly as possible and "in all events before December 25." The $45-a-month pay hold-out was applied to the first four enlisted grades in the two services and represented a living-quarters charge against airmen and sailors drawing independent allowances but living in Government-furnished barracks.

Change in Tax Setup Needed, Voters Told

The Alexandria League of Women Voters last night was told there is "a real need for fundamental change" in Virginia State and local tax structures.

Mrs. William Hitchcock, of the League's State board, said that if Virginia is to attain desirable educational and welfare levels, State and local fiscal setups must be altered. Through political action, she added.

Mrs. Hitchcock summed up remarks of several speakers who attended a recent course on Virginia tax problems at Charlottesville.

She posed these questions:

1. Should the State's special funds, except of a trust or fiduciary nature, be opened and included in the general fund? This would, perhaps, unfreeze some money for schools and mental hospitals, Mrs. Hitchcock said.

2. Should the State review its traditional pay-as-you-go philosophy with regard to borrowing Federal funds on a matching basis?

3. Concerning local revenue problems, she asked if existing tax sources are being used to the fullest, and if the State should authorize additional tax sources to be collected by the localities?

Other speakers last night included Mrs. Samuel Vanneman, who spoke on State-local fiscal relations Mrs. Garland Routt, whose topic was local revenues and expenditures; Mrs. Raymond Miller, State expenditures, and Mrs. A. J. S. Weaver, State revenues.

Ben Gurion Rallies Israel Opposition To Jerusalem Plan

Tel Aviv, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Premier David Ben Gurion today emphatically rejected a United Nations proposals for international control of Jerusalem and warned that his people would sacrifice themselves to retain their "eternal capital."

"Jews will sacrifice themselves for Jerusalem no less than Englishmen for London, Russians for Moscow and Americans for Washington," Ben Gurion told a packed session of the Israel knesset (parliament.)

The statement climaxed several days of tension here following the recommendation of a U. N. subcommittee that the Holy City be put under international control.

[The Associated Press reported from Lake Success that the United States and Britain had thrown their support to a proposed placing only the holy places of Jerusalem under a U. N. Commissioner—Editor' note.]

One on the Aisle—

Out of Past Come The Toy Theaters

By Richard L. Coe

PENNY PLAIN AND TUPPENCE COLORED: Been in The Toy Shop at 1607 I st. lately?

There you will find a plaything of the past that probably will also be a plaything of the future—one of the Pollock's toy Regency theaters. Back of the sale here of these toys adults enjoy as much as children, lies a charming story.

During the war, Miss Matilda Young, director of our Children's Museum which calls The Toy Shop home, began to wonder what had happened to Pollock's, which had made the paper and wood toys for hundred years. She wrote to the London Observer, which put its woman's editor, Alison Settle, on the story.

Mrs. Settle discovered that Pollock's, though it carried a few toys, had become a general store and that it had considered its career of selling toy theaters to an Empire was at an end. The revelation raised a storm of affection in England, where Pollock's was considered an irreplaceable tradition. This push moved the toys up near the bustling Strand; though in a small alley, near a house where once Nell Gwynn dallied. Actress Dorothy Turner last summer showed me the delightful older home that's still devoted to Toy Theaters.

In appreciation of what Miss Young started, Pollock's has now given the Children's Museum of Washington exclusive rights to the sale of the theaters in this country.

That's a mighty solid mark of appreciation, for, carefully marketed, these little stages should achieve real popularity.

They're 12 inches by 12 inches by 14 inches deep. They're made of stiff cardboard with wood frames. Sets are fitted into three slots at varying distances from the proscenium.

Olivier Adapts "Hamlet"

With each theater comes two booklets of children's plays, "Cinderella" and "Dick Whittington." Colored settings and costumed figures can be cut out and mounted, the characters being moved on the stage by wire slides.

The Penguin book firm has started publishing a line of plays especially for these small theaters, including familiar fables and fairy stories, as well as "The High Toby," especially written for the theaters by J. B. Priestly, and an adaptation of the film "Hamlet," by Sir Laurence Olivier, with settings taken from his movie designs by Roger Furse and colored costume pictures from the film.

From the Olivier and Priestly names, you can see that this childhood delight doesn't die with adulthood. One of the most amusing things I came across in London last summer was a cellar fitted up for a slightly larger version of this small set. Professional lighting had been installed by this actor, and on a series of homemade records he had an all-star cast of "Hamlet" and "Romeo and Juliet," on which such friends as Olivier, Vivien Leigh, Edith Evans, Felix Aylmer and Sir Ralph Richardson had recorded their high-priced voices.

In this country, the most noted member of the Toy Theater club is Alfred Lunt, who showed his collection—an enormous, painstakingly collected one—last year at the Museum of the City of New York.

So you see, it runs like that other so-called "Children's Toy," the electric train. Everybody gets to play with it except the small fry.

Miss Young, who's delighted with Pollock's tribute to her thoughtfulness, has only one worry. A hundred of the sets ($10 each, including "Cinderella" and "Whittington") are due to arrive shortly, but until they've been unwrapped in I st., she won't sleep o'nights.

Penny Plain and Tuppence Colored? That's Robert Louis Stevenson's title for his well-loved essay on the subject. In the early days, when life was less hectic for our small fry, it was considered virtuous to spend less money and do your own coloring of stage, sets and characters. Those willing to pay twice as much didn't get the fun of the leisurely work.

'Tom Sawyer' Amazingly Good, Is Violet Heming's Verdict

By Violet Heming

(Star of stage, screen and radio, now resident in Washington as the wife of Judge Bennett Champ Clark.)

HAVING BEEN a juvenile actor myself, it is extremely difficult for me to write in cold judgment of freshmen in a craft of which I am an alumna. I am hopelessly prejudiced in their favor.

Violet Heming

Watching the Children's Theater of Washington play "Tom Sawyer" the other afternoon, I became every proud and fearful mother sitting out front. I thrilled at each discovery of resourcefulness to the point of tears. I applauded wildly. I always do.

The "Tom Sawyer" performance was a beautiful experience for me, especially since the juvenile portion of the audience was almost as fascinating to watch as the young players on stage.

I don't know how prejudiced my judgment is, but I thought this "Tom Sawyer" amazingly good and the sustained interest and excitement of the audience testified to sound workmanship.

I was entirely enchanted with Mistress Carolyn McKnight's "Becky" Thatcher. This little miss had strength, personality and plenty of Victorian sex appeal, and in her opening quarrel scene with Tom, verily the lass "tore a passion to tatters." Her poise and quietude had the charm of inherent skill and her liveliness a fire that was exactly right for the young girl of Mark Twain's boyhood in Missouri.

A Nine-Year-Old Hero

And then there was the most stalwart young man of the ensemble, a 9-year-old who definitely shows signs of being the executive type. His proper blundering of "The Wreck of the Hesperus" had grave sincerity, and in the final scene he displayed the germ of a great director in a piece of highly tactful and unobvious marshalling of the members of the cast. They had crowded out of their rehearsed positions, thereby covering the heroine from view and sound.

This young fellow quietly and firmly shepherded them back into place, and when they mutely asked him if all was now as it should be, he reassured them with a nod that had the gravity of Belasco.

The complete carrying of the make-believe into the by-play when the scene was centered elsewhere, and yet held down neither to obstruct nor divert, would, I felt, have done justice to many a veteran and speaks highly for the director, Mrs. Rose Robison Cowen.

The children in the cast were, in the main, better than the adults, which reminds me of something the late George Arliss said when making his first motion picture: "Children, dogs and trajns are always so much more lifelike in the movies than the actors can ever hope to be."

That's why I believe so in a children's theater, to find one's craft before the years of inhibitions set in to crush and palsy imagination. It is one of the few training grounds we have left for actors and their audiences.

Both of Mrs. Cowen's two casts of "Tom Sawyer" will repeat their performances this week-end at Roosevelt High School auditorium, for which seats are now on sale at the Snow agency, 1108 G st. The cast I saw, headed by Mistress Carolyn McKnight and Peter Barash, will play Friday night at 8:15. The one with Sandra Gold and Kent Seegmiller wil perform Saturday afternoon at 2:30.

So Mark Twain's Missouri has been recreated for us by our children (never have I heard the name of its capital uttered with more elegant detachment). And my capable young man of the Hesperus? If he never goes any further on the stage, I think he'll remember his part in "Tom Sawyer," even if he becomes president of a steel company or president of something else, you mark me!

Truck Victim Takes $15,500 Settlement

A 25-year-old Army Map Service employe who was permanently injured here in a traffic accident will receive $15,500, according to an out-of-court settlement of her District Court damage suit.

She is Miss Betty Barrett Krausz, of 3138 Porter st. nw. The defendant was Woodward & Lothrop, Inc.

Miss Krausz suffered a spine injury on June 22, 1946, when her automobile was struck at Connecticut ave. and Porter sts. nw. by a truck of the department store.

Physicians testified that her back has not adequately responded to treatment and that an exploratory operation may be necessary.

The case was settled after trial was begun before Judge David A. Pine. Miss Krausz was represented by Attorney James M. Earnest.

In another case, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Hightower of 118 Tenneseee ave. ne., won a total of $8000. The defendants, Joseph Gibson of 3766 Hayes st. ne., and Daniel Gibson, 339 Division ave. ne., did not contest the suit.

Mrs. Hightower, who received $5000 under the jury verdict, suffered a brain concussion and fractured facial bones from an automobile collision at Central ave. near 65th st., Prince Georges County, Md. Mr. Hightower received the other $3000 for injuries that included severe contusions and lacerations.

Godfrey L. Munter, the Hightower attorney, argued that the Gibbons were negligent and that this resulted in the accident.

Campus Paper Hits Eisenhower, 'Trial Balloon'

New York, Dec. 5 (NYHT).—A student newspaper today sharply attacked the views on "security" expressed last week by Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University.

An editorial in the Columbia Daily Spectator said that if Eisenhower's speech before the St. Andrews Society at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel Wednesday was a "trial balloon" for the presidential nomination in 1952, "we think public reaction will soon flatten it."

Eisenhower told the society too many people seek "an illusory thing called security at the expense of individual liberty."

Right to Drop Trains Asked In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—An application by the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad to discontinue two passenger trains between Leesburg and Rosslyn was taken under advisement today by the State Corporation Commission.

The railroad asked permission to discontinue Trains 2 and 3 on the grounds that passenger use failed to justfy continued operation.

The proposed discontinuance would leave four trains in use on two daily trips between Leesbury and Rosslyn. Train 2 leaves Leesburg at 5:50 a. m., arriving in Rosslyn at 7:35 a. m.; Train 3 leaves Rosslyn at 6:05 p. m. and arrives in Leesburg at 7:50 p. m.

Opponents of the petition at a two-hour meeting this morning included L. E. Mann of Herndon, Mrs. Nellie O. Fletcher and W. A. Fletcher, who appeared in behalf of the Kate A. Orrison estate.

Mann represented objectors in Loudoun, Fairfax and Arlington Counties.

George C. Baggett, vice president and general manager of the railroad, was the only person to testify for the applicant.

Baggett told the commission that the commuters' trains were put on during the war when transportation was scarce and said, "We believe we have lived up to what was expected of us."

Objectors to the petition contended that the service was highly unsatisfactory and they said that if conditions could be improved more passengers would use the trains.

Mann presented several petitions requesting the SCC to deny the railroad's petition.

Mrs. Fletcher said the company should "cooperate with the people in the area."

"I love railroads," she added, "but in the last few months I have been very disapointed with the Washington & Old Dominion."

Surgery Gives Sight Back to Woman, 101

New York, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—"They thought it was foolish," Mrs. Amelia Marie Propper laughed today.

"But it was the one thing I wanted and I had nothing to lose, so I had it done."

That "one thing" Mrs. Propper wanted was the use of her blind eyes. The reason doctors and friends thought it was foolish for her to undergo surgery for the removal of a cataract was that she is 101 years old.

Eyes That Saw Lincoln

"You'd think that after 100 years, she would have seen enough," was the way one hospital official summed it up.

If that idea were true for any woman it would be true for Mrs. Propper. Her eyes have given her memories of gold prospecting in Nevada, life among the American Indians and a meeting with Abraham Lincoln. She lost her sight about a year ago.

But memories are not enough for this lively woman. She entered Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center November 16 and the next day, just one week after she celebrated her 101st birthday, underwent the operation.

At the hospital the doctors and nurses soon learned what everyone in her home, the House of Holy Comforter, knew—that nothing could break her cheerfulness and bright outlook.

Right Eye Sightless

She won her battle for sight. Doctors will fit her with glasses within a week and she will have vision in her left eye. Her right eye will remain blind.

She confirmed the doctors' report that she is in good physical condition:

"I feel the same now as I've felt for a long time. And that's better than a lot of women of 75."

Convention Told

Non-Poison Rat Killer Developed

The men who battle bugs and bacteria yesterday heard of two new death-dealing weapons for enemies of the housewife.

One is a lethal chemical compound that bumps off rats without the danger of poison. The other is a water-softener built into soap which may also eliminate bathtub rings.

A University of Wisconsin professor who says his first name is "Rattor" told the thirty-sixth annual meeting of the National Association of Insecticide and Disinfectant Manufacturers about the new compound for killing rodents.

Blood Does Not Coagulate

It is derived from salicylic acid, said Prof. Karl Paul Link. The compound, which kills rats through action of a discourmaron molecule, is known as WARF 42. It was developed under the Wisconsin Alumni Research Fund, Link said.

The compound causes rodents to die from hemorrhage because it keeps the blood from coagulating.

To prove it's not toxic to humans, Link said he tried it on a chicken, which he ate.

WARF 42 is being shipped to manufacturers for test purposes, an official said.

John J. Singer and Frederick C. Bersworth, of the Bersworth Chemical Co., Framingham, Mass., told delegates of "versene," an agent that inactivates harmful metallic ions in soap.

Rings in the Bathtub

Aside from the dirt off Junior's body, soap and other reagents cause rings in the bath tub because of precipitation of these ions.

Versene, Singer and Bersworth said, "effectively removes hardness (in water) without the formation of precipitates such as are formed with ordinary water-softening agents."

J. L. Brenn, president of the Huntington (Ind.) Laboratories, told the association Europe is "35 years behind the United States in public sanitation." Breen was one of many observers from 'surgeons to chicken raisers" who toured the continent under auspices of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce and the Indianapolis Chamber.

The association, which yesterday adopted the name of Chemical Specialties Manufacturers Association, Inc., will conclude its meeting today with other talks, election of officers and a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

Senator Ives Asks Anti-Segregation Practice in Army

Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.), prodded President Truman Monday to enforce the orders he issued nearly 18 months ago to abolish racial segregation in the Army.

The Senator informed the President in a letter that he had received a report that the Army was "still adhering to a policy of racial segregation" in defiance of a presidential directive of July, 1948.

The President's order did not specifically bar segregation, but directed that "equality of treatment and opportunity" be established as rapidly as possible throughout the armed services without regard for race, creed, color or national origin.

Monday's letter by Senator Ives may set the stage for another civil rights battle in Congress early next year. Democrats have pledged to call up a fair employment practices bill modeled after one introduced originally by Senator Ives.

Mass and Breakfast For Catholic Nurses

The Rev. Ignatius Smith, O.P., will be celebrant at the annual communion mass of the Archdiocesan Council of Catholic Professional Nurses at 9 a. m. Sunday at St. Patrick's Church, 10th and G sts. nw.

After the service, the nurses will have breakfast at the Willard Hotel, 14th and E sts. nw.

Radiologists Told Cancer Death Rate Is Decreasing

Cleveland, Dec. 5 (AP).—Although the number of cancer cases is increasing, the diseas's death rate is dropping, the Radiological Institute of North America was told today.

Dr. Edgar P. McNamee of Cleveland, president of the society, estimated there will be approximately 300,000 new cancer cases this year, approximately 85 percent among persons over 40.

The greatest death rate decrease, he said, is in cancer of easily accessible areas. He reported that delay in treatment is a major cause of the disease's high death rate.

Dr. McNamee urged an education program to teach the public that cancer can be cured in early stages and to help eliminate fear of the disease.

Road Building for All Ordered by Romania

Bucharest, Dec. 5 (AP).—A government decree today ordered millions of Romanians—most of the nation's population—to work from two to 20 days a year on road building.

Local councils may grant exemptions, but persons exempted will be obliged to pay an equivalent road tax.

The road draft applies to men from 18 to 56 years and women from 18 to 45. Many foreigners who have lived in Romania for six months also are included.

Plan to Treat D. C. Ill at Home Outlined

The District Health Department early next year expects to inaugurate a small-scale project for treatment of the indigent chronically ill at home, Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger said yesterday.

The District health officer revealed the plan at a meeting of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association in the Mayflower Hotel.

The project will be undertaken as a "pilot study" with a grant from the United States Public Health Service, and with participation by District medical schools, and the Instructive Visiting Nurses Society, he said.

Purpose of Plan

Dr. Seckinger explained a primary aim of the plan would be to determine the difference in cost between keeping the indigent chronically ill in city hospitals, and treating them at home under medical supervision.

Diseases which may come under the project, he said, would be tuberculosis, cancer, diabetes, kidney and heart ailments. He pointed out home treatment would relieve the already overcrowded hospital facilities for indigent patients.

A similar plan was suggested last September by Gallinger Hospital officials, and is included in the Health Department's budget requests for the coming year.

Program Under Way

Dr. Seckinger said a detailed program for the pilot study would be submitted shortly to the Commissioners.

The association indorsed proposed amendments to the D. C. Plumbing Code, which Dr. Seckinger outlined. These are intended to cut down health hazards from the 25,000 outdoor toilets and water hydrants in Washington.

The amendments propose that a date be set by which time all outdoor toilets and hydrants must be replaced by inside fixtures.

Forest Hills

Herbert P. Leeman, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, congratulated the Forest Hills Citizens Association last night on its twentieth anniversary celebration.

Offering their congratulations also at a buffet supper at the Webster House, 503 D st. nw., were Capt. John E. Fondahl, of the Eighth Precinct Station, and Gordon M. Atherholt, president of the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations. Joseph A. Kaufmann, association president, introduced the speakers.

Six of the original 20 charter members were among the 50 persons present.

Minnesota Center

A resolution favoring licensing of building contractors in Washington and establishing safeguards in their work was passed last night by the Minnesota Center Citizens Association. The group met at the City Bank, 3839 Minnesota ave. ne.

The association also voted:

To ask reassignment to the Fourteenth Police Precinct of Pvt. Harry Barker, recently transferred.

To ask painting of walk lines on the pavement at Benning rd. and Minnesota ave. ne.

To favor construction of the E. Capitol st. bridge.

And to oppose moving of the Soldiers Home without full consent of the occupants.

Stanton Park

The Stanton Park Citizens Association last night requested changing the taxi fare zone boundary at 2d st. ne. to the center of Union Station so Northeast passengers will pay only a one-zone fare to the station.

Meeting at Peabody School, 5th and C sts. ne., the group also requested widening of C st. between 4th and 6th sts. ne. Miss Madeline Hanna, 618 C st. ne., was appointed secretary to succeed Tracy Madden, who resigned after serving since 1944.

Southwest

The Southwest Citizens Association last night asked for a law requiring all persons who handle foodstuffs commercially in the District to have a health card.

The 123 persons meeting at the Jefferson Junior High School also called for an ordinance prohibiting burning of trash or garbage in open yards.

In a request to the Board of Education and the Recreation Department, the group asked that the athletic field at Jefferson Junior High School, 7th and G sts. sw., be equipped with lights for night games.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association demanded a 25 jercent reduction in all taxes on automobiles in a meeting last night at Whittier School, 5th and Sheridan sts. nw. Fifty persons attended.

Michigan Park

The Michigan Park Citizens Association last night voted to give prizes of 15, 10 and 5 dollars to the three Michigan Park homes with the prettiest outside Christmas trappings.

A committee of six judges was appointed at the meeting in Bunker High School, 14th st. and Michigan ave. ne.

The 80 persons present also voted to sponsor Christmas parties at the Country Home for Convalescent Children, 18th and Bunker Hill rd. ne., December 19, and for pre-school children at Turkey Thicket Playground December 22.

President Charles S. Faller appointed a committee to study constitutional revision. Philip A. Dolan, a past president whose bid for a place on the committee was turned down, charged the appointments were biased.

National Gateway

Gilbert C. Vincent, 2525 Bladensburg rd. ne., was elected last night to his fifth term as president of the National Gateway Citizens Association.

Gordon H. Ferris was re-elected vice president. New officers elected were Mrs. Mona G. Thatcher, secretary; Vincent A. Goudreau, assistant secretary; George Heim, financial secretary, and Bennett Miller, treasurer.

Meeting at Avalon Heights Church of Christ, 28th and Douglas sts. ne., the group, backed a Federation of Citizens Association move to reopen hearings on the rate increase recently granted to the Washington Gas Light Co. It also indorsed a Brentwood Terrace Citizens Association resolution calling for licensing of District building contractors.

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The controversial self-portrait of Van Gogh, owned by movie producer William Goetz, will be returned to the original owner who had offered to rebuy it if at any time its authenticity was questioned. This week a jury selected by the Metropolitan Museum of Art declined to certify that it is a genuine Van Gogh, although eminent Van Gogh experts attest to its authenticity . . . Goetz himself is positive that the portrait is genuine. "But this is going to be another Shakespeare-Bacon controversy, for the next 25 years," said the sensitive producer. "And if I hold onto the painting people might say it's only because I'm a sucker who got stuck and couldn't get my money back."

Leland Hayward, the producer, is buying the movie rights to six short stories by Irwin Shaw, and plans to use them in the way Somerset Maugham's stories were combined for "Quartet." Such directors as Elia Kazan and Billy Wilder will direct each sequence . . . Roland Young's television-interview, in which he uttered but two words, was the most concise in the history of communications. "What do you think of television?" the interviewer asked him, and Young said, "Revolting." The interviewer continued: "Then why are you on this TV program?" and Young said: "Money."

Backstage at the Metropolitan Opera House the husbands and wives of some of the singers were discussing their own reactions to opera-going. The best example cited was about the performance of "Tosca" in which Lawrence Tibbett was to sing. That evening, Vincent Sheean was to be the guest of Mrs. Tibbett, and they went to dinner at a restaurant nearby. As curtain time approached, Sheean, who is an opera fan, kept glancing at his watch, and suggested that it was time to leave . . . "Oh, there's no hurry yet," replied Mrs. Tibbett. "Larry doesn't go on till 8:27."

Only six Democratic Governors attended the luncheon for the Alben Barkleys at Sherry's. Gov. Jim Folsom of Alabama said: "And of the six Governors here, only one's a Yankee. Us Rebels have it. I wouldn't be surprised if we signed some bill of annexation of New York City" . . . Heywood Hale Broun, the former newspaperman, has been signed for his second role on Broadway. He'll appear in Arthur Laurents' play, "The Bird Cage."

LAFF-A-DAY

"I should think you folks could take care of shoveling the snow. After all, we swept off the walk all last summer"

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Children and Hospitals

Do the doctors and nurses in your hospital know much about children?

There's probably no question about their medical background. But far too many medical people are grossly ignorant about youngsters. Today, much more than formerly, both nurses and doctors are given some training in understanding and working with children. But it hasn't been long since this was not considered a part of a medical education.

Over and over again, one hears of children having bad experiences in hospitals. They are left alone without being made to feel at home. Parents and relatives may visit only a couple of times a week. When a treatment—painful or otherwise—must be given, little attempt is made to get the youngsters' voluntary cooperation. Even when they are in pain and full of natural fears, they may be scolded or punished for things they don't understand.

It's important for parents and hospital staff to get together on the problem. In one New York community recently, indignant parents insisted that there be a change. At first, the hospital refused even to listen but a firm, though tactful, insistence that children be treated as human beings rather than as cases brought about a change which even the hospital staff now admits has helped them do a better job of treating ill children.

Nation's Job Total Up 517,000

By The Associated Press

The number of Americans regularly employed rose 517,000 in November.

Reporting this yesterday, the Census Bureau said unemployment declined 167,000.

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer commented:

"The job picture in November was perhaps more favorable than at any previous time this year."

The Census Bureau explained that the drop in unemployment was smaller than the rise in employment because of "an increase in the number of seasonal workers looking for jobs."

The bureau's report showed employment totaled 59,518,000 in November as compared with 59,001,000 in October and 59,893,000 for November, 1948.

The number of jobless was listed as 3,409,000 in November, as compared with 3,576,00 0in October and 1,831,000 in November, 1949.

Under the bureau's statistical methods, anyone who has a regular job is counted as employed whether or not he is working at his job. Coal miners on strike, for instance, are counted as employed.

Non-farm employment jumped up 350,000 in November, reflecting the pickup in factory operations, which had been slowed in October by effects of the steel and coal strikes.

Non-farm employment, at a total of 51,640,000, was "back to the 1949 high recorded in the late summer months," the bureau said.

It was, however, nearly 300,000 below November, 1948, just as unemployment was close to double the figure of a year ago.

Farm employment itself scored a gain of 168,000 in November, a month when the number of farm workers usually declines.

"Good weather in the early part of November in most areas permitted completion of harvesting operations which had been delayed by heavy rains," the bureau reported.

Wrapped in Love

Our hands are very busy now . . . Before and after meals . . . With boxes and with ribbons and . . . With pretty Christmas seals . . . For we are sending packages . . . To people far and near . . . To share with them our sentiment . . . Of happiness and cheer . . . Our gifts are not expensive and . . . They may not fill a need . . . But each reflects the gentle thought . . . That prompts a kindly deed . . . With green and red and silver and . . . A touch of gold and blue . . . We hope that every addressee . . . Will find a dream come true . . . We hope each parcel that we ship . . . Will make somebody glad . . . And help this Christmas be the best . . . That person ever had.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Maybe Too Many of Us Are on Diets

I see by the news columns that another local tavern has lost its liquor license because "food did not constitute the major part of its business."

This is one of the most arbitrary legal booby traps I've ever encountered.

It's arbitrary because the law is not uniformly enforced. For every place that's closed on those grounds, dozens are permitted to stay open.

Here's the background: When our liquor laws were written, there was practically unanimous agreement that the old-time saloon should not be permitted to return. The sale of liquor was to be a minor adjunct to the sale of food.

But since that time many restaurants and taverns have found that they take in more money on bar business than from their kitchens. With an ounce of good whiskey selling for almost the price of a meal, that's easy to understand.

As a matter of fact, classified ads offering restaurants for sale often brag about this imbalance in such enticing phrases as: "Big business, mostly liquor."

But the sad truth is that this law is never enforced against places which are deemed respectable. It's used solely as a club against license holders who are considered undesirable, but who cannot be convicted of any other specific offense.

And that's why I don't think it's a sound procedure. Enforcement tends to depend on the opinions of public officials, rather than on uniformly administered laws.

If we can't get rid of "undesirable" tavernkeepers in truly legal fashion, maybe we ought to tighten up our liquor laws.

OVERHEARD

Tom Ford, who shoved off Saturday for an ECA post in Paris, left this gem with me. In a downtown grill he overheard one businessman tell another.

"This is the kind of town in which you can sell earmuffs in July—if you just merchandise them right."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The signs outside the Whittier School prohibit parking during school hours. We mothers who drive children to school and pick them up afterward have always utilized the restricted space for that purpose.

If we arrive a few minutes before school is over, we wait in the car, motor running, until the children arrive.

But recently a motorcycle policeman has been ordering us to move along, and there is so little parking space available in this vicinity that we sometimes have to park several blocks away and then trudge back to meet the children.

Several tickets have been issued to mothers who were actually loading children in their cars at the time, and inasmuch as we sometimes transport as many as six or eight children per car, this is a great inconvenience. There is no sign there which prohibits "standing."

Mrs. Morris Smith,
24 Tuckerman st. nw.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

First let's get straight on those confusing "No Standing" signs. They mean absolutely nothing to the driver of a pleasure car.

A trucker who is loading or unloading—or making a delivery that keeps him away from his truck for as long as a half hour—is deemed to be "standing."

But a private vehicle is technically "parked" the moment the wheels stop turning. An officer has the right to hand out tickets, even to drivers who wait in their cars.

However, Lieut. Ray Aggleson of Number 6 tells me that the police would much rather work out a reasonable understanding with mothers than give them tickets. He invites you to drop in to see Capt. Archie M. Winfree, and discuss your problem with him and with the precinct's Schoolboy Coordinator.

Lieutenant Aggleson says that this same problem exists at practically every school in the District — especially on rainy days. If there were just one car or two, the police would prefer to overlook the technical violation.

But when many cars are waiting—some of them double-parked—there's only one thing to do, and that's to clear them all out so that the schoolboy patrols can get the children across the street in safety.

A possible solution might be to have the children wait for you instead of vice versa. Lieutenant Aggleson tells me that even in "No Parking" areas, motorists are usually permitted to pause long enough to pick up or discharge passengers.

Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

Dorothy Jenner, 1601 Argonne pl. nw.: The Washington Post will publish a free classified ad for the finder of a lost article.

Connie Krueger, 227-A Bates st. nw.: Do I ever reprint items from the Reader's Digest? No, not knowingly, because we try to use our limited space for original contributions. But I have no objection at all to the Reader's Digest reprinting items from this column. They pay such wonderful fees.

Henry Wood, jr., 5809 S. 4th st., Arlington, Va: The line "By Arthur Ellis" under the picture means that Post Photographer Ellis is getting a by-line for an excellent picture, just as a reporter gets his name on an exceptionally good story. However, it does not mean that Ellis wrote the caption or underlines. The photographer turns in explanatory notes, including a left-to-right identification of his subjects. The caption and underlines which appear in the paper are written by others.

Frederic M. Wald, 2803 28th st. nw.: Tell Liz I said if she likes this column she's got excellent taste—for pure corn.

Mrs. Richard H. Adams, 101 Fairhaven ave., Alexandria, Va.: In the lobby of The Washington Post, you'll find a file of recent editions, which you can check to determine which day's paper you want. A few steps away, at the counter, you can buy back issues (up to 30 days) for 5 cents each. Older issues are often available from our Circulation Department, but not always.

THESE CHANGING TIMES

These days when a fellow starts out to make a pile, it often turns out he's not interested in money, but atomic research.

MURDER WILL OUT

The apartment house janitor, making his rounds, took one look at the incinerator and ran frantically for the resident manager.

"There's been a murder," gasped the janitor to his boss. "They've hacked up the body and stuffed it in the incinerator and left the legs on the floor beside it."

"Good grief," moaned the manager. "Let me take a look before you call the police."

The janitor led him to the incinerator, and pointed to the legs in the dimly lit corner. The manager approached cautiously for a better look—then broke into loud laugher.

"You can open the incinerator door, Joe," he said. "There's no body in it. Don't you remember the lady on the third floor who finally got out of her plaster casts yesterday?"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

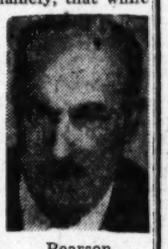
So. American Fascism Perils U.S.

By Drew Pearson

"How in the hell do you get out of this place?" wrote the mute.

Copyright, 1949, The Bell Syndicate, Inc.

Recent revolution and rioting in Latin America has pointed up what the American public has long dimly realized, namely, that while we are fighting communism in Europe, we are losing out to fascism at our own front door.



Pearson

Panama, which surrounds the most important waterway in the world so far as the United States is concerned, is now in the hands of a dictator, Arnulfo Arias, who had roots in Germany and Italy during the days of Hitler and Mussolini. Just before Pearl Harbor, we considered him such a menace, the United States helped to euchre him out of the presidency.

In Colombia, a country equally vital to the strategic waterway which links east-west shipping, the bloodiest riots in history have been taking place. Approximately 1000 people have been killed, and a Fascist Party, deliberately aided and abetted by Dictator Franco of Spain, has instituted such terror that it was impossible to hold two-way elections.

While United States Senators have been enjoying Dictator Franco's lush wines in Madrid, Franco has been pulling the rug right out from under United States policy in one of the most important countries in the Pan American Union.

Months ago Laureano Gomez, now the Colombian strong man, went to Madrid and arranged with Franco to have his shock Falange forces smuggled into Colombia disguised in the robes of priests. Bloodshed and rioting has followed ever since.

Our Pan Americanism

In the White House, Harry Truman speaks glowingly of his visits to Mexico and Brazil. He is also delighted at the prospect of making a trip to Chile. He considers Pan-American relations one of his most important policies, and if anyone walked in and told him the Good-Neighbor Policy had bogged down, he just wouldn't believe it.

But the trouble with President Truman is that he thinks of Pan-American friendship in terms of getting out a lot of flags and the brass bands to greet President Dutra of Brazil. He doesn't realize that the Good-Neighbor Policy must be closely coordinated and carefully carried out every day of the year.

Over in the State Department, meanwhile, one of the best young men in some years, Edward Miller, is Assistant Secretary for Latin America. Miller was born in Puerto Rico, speaks Spanish, knows Latin America intimately, works hard at his job.

Over in the Export-Import Bank, also, far more loans have been advanced in Latin America than most people realize.

But a successful good-neighbor policy isn't built up merely by dumping money into Latin America, or giving rousing welcomes to visiting Pan-American potentates.

Today we have a lot of well-meaning cogs in our diplomatic machinery, but sometimes they seem to be turning separately and in different directions. In brief, the gears do not mesh.

Jesse Jones' Rival

It looks like Jesse Jones, long considered the financial czar and once an aspiring political czar of Texas, now has a real rival. He is Texas Oil Tycoon Glenn McCarthy of Houston, who recently helped mastermind "Sam Rayburn Day."

McCarthy has recently built a swank 15-story hotel in Houston, the Shamrock, and now aspires to build a new business center on the outskirts of Houston. To finance it, McCarthy is reported in the market for an RFC loan, and it was considered significant that he sent his plush stratoliner private airplane to Washington to fly some RFC officials to Houston for "Sam Rayburn Day."

NOTE—Democratic political factions in Houston were split over the Sam Rayburn celebration. While Sam is personally popular with all ranks of Democrats, political control of the city has been taken over by the Truman-Labor group, and they organized the demonstration for Sam. Old Guard Democrats did not cooperate. In fact, Old Guards were privately pleased when only 1500 people showed up in the auditorium which holds 15,000.

He Couldn't Escape

Capitol Cop Bill Carter hot-footed over to the House Un-American Activities Committee the other day to investigate a commotion. The clerks were in a dither about a mysterious stranger who had blubbered incoherently at them and fled down the hall. The flustered clerks suspected he was out of his head, suggested he ought to be locked up. So Carter took after him in hot pursuit.

In a moment, the cop caught up with the stranger and demanded sternly: "What is it you want?"

Futilely the stranger made noises and gestured. Then in disgust, he took out some paper and scribbled a note.
